FREE CLINIC FOR COUNTY'S CRIPPLED CHILDREN HERE JULY 11 AND 12

The free clinic for all crippled children in Ulster county arranged by the Kingston Rotary Club, will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 and 12, in the board of health and police commissioners' rooms in the city hall, from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., on both days.

Experts from the State Department of Health will conduct the clinic, which is for all crippled children, regardless of the cause of their condition. It is intended to coordinate this clinic with the work of the State Bureau for the Vocational Training of Cripples, which supports cripples while they are learning a trade or vocation until such time as they become self-supporting.

The clinics for victims of infantile paralysis have proved so successful that the Rotary Club has arranged, through its standing committee on crippled children, of which Dr. Mark O'Meara is chairman, to extend the work to children crippled from other causes.

Those who attend are expected to bring a note from their attending physician, and all physicians in the county are invited to bring in their cases and assist in the clinic.

J.D. SCHOONMAKER HAS ACCEPTED

John D. Schoonmaker who was recently appointed a member of the board of water commissioners by Mayor Walter P. Crane has written the mayor the following letter of acceptance:

"My Dear Mayor:

"I am in receipt of your official notice of my appointment to the board of water commissioners of Kingston and I accept the appointment as tendered to me.

"I believe the city of Kingston is especially fortunate in having a board of water commissioners who are as efficient as this board has shown itself to be.

"I appreciate your confidence in me and thank you for the appointment. I am,

Sincerely yours,

JOHN D. SCHOONMAKER."

BLOWS HOT, BLOWS COLD, SAYS FRIEND

Treman Loves Irene Castle Wildly, But She Doesn't Know Her Own Mind, Says Intimate of Captain in Paris.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, July 6.—"Irene Castle blows hot and cold for a husband who loves her wildly," a close friend of Captain Robert Treman, Ithaca, N. Y., millionaire, told International News Service, today.

"He is willing to follow her around the world," the friend said.

"He did follow her to Europe in an attempt to prevent the divorce action that was filed in the Seine tribunal."

The trouble is, the friend of the husband said, that "Irene doesn't know her own mind."

"At times" the friend continued, "she is most affectionate and shows her fondness for Robert. But sometimes she is coldly indifferent and dislikes the very sight of him."

"She changes suddenly a summer day for winter-like indifference."

Several times in New York City, Treman was at the very point of suing for a divorce, according to some of her intimates.

But she changed her mind each time and finally left for Europe without filing an action.

Captain Treman followed—with a lawyer. His wife was stopping at the Princess, so he went to the Claridge and prepared for eventualities. He even engaged a firm of French lawyers as his American attorney could not appear before the French bar.

Then he threw over his course of passive resistance and began to woo his wife over again. In the face of the filing of her suit he continued his suit on the day the news leaked out that Irene had begun divorce proceedings, she went to dinner with her husband, announced that the filing of the suit was unauthorized and told of plans to accompany her husband to Deauville the following day.

The trip to Deauville, which Treman's friends say he regards as his second honeymoon, was made yesterday in an automobile.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN STREET

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 6.—Police were confronted by another mystery today in the death of an unidentified elderly woman, whose body was found early today on the pavement in front of No. 61 Audubon avenue. A deep gash in the back of the woman's head left the police with two theories—murder or accident.

The position of the body was indicative that the woman was not struck by an automobile. The suicide belief was refuted by surgeons who said the gash was not self-inflicted and there were no other injuries to substantiate the supposition that the woman had jumped from the building in front of which her body was found.

Police are awaiting identification before working on the murder theory. The victim was about sixty, gray haired and wore a polka dot dress, white lace collar and black hat.

MOTHER OF 5 KILLS FATHER OF 9 WHO DECEIVED HER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 6.—A charge of murder was filed today against Mrs. Louis Arnold, 46, mother of five children, who confessed to having stabbed to death Vincent Calvacca, father of nine children, after she learned that he was a married man and had deceived her.

At her arraignment Mrs. Arnold admitted killing her lover.

"I did not know he was married," she said. "He told me he would marry me. I believed him for seven years. Then I discovered he had a wife and nine children of his own. He told me he had other wives in other towns too."

Mrs. Arnold said she visited the children's court building where Calvacca, a carpenter, 37, day and a building cleaner by night, worked. "I stabbed him with a knife I carried in a paper sack," Mrs. Arnold told the police. "After that I looked up the building and went home. Neighbors laughed at me—they knew my lover was a married man and I didn't. I just couldn't stand the laughs of my neighbors."

TIRE DEALERS' ASS'N. CONVENTION IN NOVEMBER

The fourth annual convention of the National Tire Dealers' Association (headquarters, 242 West 56th street, New York, N. Y.) will be held in New York city on November 12-14-15. It is expected that retail tire merchants from all sections of the country will participate in the business sessions of the convention.

George J. Burger, of New York, is president of the national organization, and will co-operate with the Greater New York Tire Dealers' Association in preparing a program for next fall's meeting.

SPAIN FEARS FASCISTI COUP

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Madrid, July 6.—General Aguilera, military leader, loomed today as the Spanish Mussolini as rumors filled the city that a Fascisti coup was imminent.

The air is full of political agitation and the military party has spread propaganda against the government throughout Spain.

Aims of the Aguilera forces, which are believed to have the support of the army, are to rush the Socialists and punish those believed responsible for the Morocco disaster.

TREMAN'S "SECOND HONEYMOON" INTERRUPTED

The Captain Leaves Deauville For Paris.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Deauville, July 6.—Captain Robert Treman, wealthy husband of Irene Castle, who came here yesterday with his wife on their "second honeymoon," left suddenly this morning on an early train for Paris.

The reason for the early interruption of the honeymoon plans could not be ascertained. Mrs. Treman remained here at the hotel Normandie.

Treman and his dancer wife arrived yesterday by motor from Paris after he had apparently succeeded in winning her away from plans for a divorce. Actual steps toward the divorce had been taken by Mrs. Treman who had filed suit in the Seine tribunal.

The couple had announced they would spend several days here.

NEW JERSEY TOURISTS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

An auto accident, which resulted fortunately for the occupants of the car, occurred on Barclay Heights, Saugerties, July 4. A big Mitchell car, instead of making the turn at Simmons's corner, shot down the hill of Burd street and the driver no doubt losing control, caused the car to hit the bank near Mrs. O. T. Simmons's residence, and this completely turned it over, burying Mr. and Mrs. John McCloski, son and daughter, of New Jersey, under the wreckage.

Dr. R. F. Diebling attended from shock and the daughter had a few bruises. The top of the car and windshield were smashed and the radiator dented. The car was taken to Snyder's garage, Saugerties, for repairs.

COAL MINERS CALL FOR TWENTY PER CENT RAISE

Would Amount to $2 Per Day Per Man—Demand Changes in Working Rules That Would Make Earnings Higher.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6.—The question of peace or war in the coal fields hangs in the balance as the anthracite joint wage conference prepares to begin what promises to be a long series of negotiations in an effort to draft a wage scale to take the place of the present agreement which expires August 31. The first session of the conference will be held here this afternoon. Unless an agreement is reached, it seems inevitable that a strike will be called for September 1.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, announced when the conference met, he would move that representatives of the press be permitted to sit in the council chamber during all negotiations. Representatives of the operators now here for what is regarded as the most important industrial conference in recent years declined to say whether they would support the movement for "open" covenants openly arrived at. It is believed, however, that they will insist on secret sessions.

As the hour of the conference approached there was every indication that both sides expected it would be a long drawn out affair, with an agreement, if one is to be reached, commencing only after days of tedious negotiations.

Little was expected to be accomplished at the opening session beyond effecting preliminaries, organization and the formal presentation of the miners' demands. These demands as formulated at the Scranton meeting of the workers last week, embrace eleven specific points, summarized as follows:

1. Complete recognition of the United Mine Workers of America, with a two year contract beginning September 1, 1923.
2. Twenty percent increase in contract wage scales, all men to be granted an increase of $2 per day.
3. Uniformity and equalization of all day rates to skilled mechanics with 90 cents per hour as a basis.
4. Eight hour day for all men employed in and around collieries irrespective of their occupation.
5. Where coal is paid for by the car, the ton basis shall be 2,240 pounds.
6. That the consideration rate for work under abnormal conditions and for dead work equal the average daily earnings of contract miners under normal conditions.
7. That Jack hammers and other tools be furnished the miners free of charge.
8. Minimum rate of 20 cents per inch for refuse and 30 cents per inch for blasting top and bottom rock.
9. That umpire shall render decisions within thirty days after disposal of cases by conciliation board.
10. That wage schedules be brought up to date and that agreement on rates for new work made before starting such work.
11. That employees of stripping contractors be brought under same scale of wages as demanded by miners.

In addition, the negotiators for the miners are urged to secure an agreement regarding the price of coal and rent to be charged employees.

Asked for a statement regarding the miners' demands, Lewis said the demands speak for themselves.

"As officers of the union, we have been instructed to endeavor to secure an agreement along the lines indicated," he said.

HAROLD POW IS A HIGH KICKER

Tried His Skill On Traffic Standard And It Cost Him $7—Two Drunks Face Judge Schirick—Speeders Forfeit Bail

Shortly after midnight this morning Harold Pow, 19 years old of Bridgeport, Conn., who is working at the Burgevin hot houses and boarding at 110 St. James street, imbibed a few drinks and then started to show the world that he was "some kicker". He kicked over a wooden fruit stand on North Front street, and followed it up by kicking over a garbage can, and wound up the performance by kicking over a traffic standard and damaging it $2 worth. At this juncture Harold's activities were brought to a sudden halt by Officer Camp and this morning Judge Schirick fined Harold $5 for being real naughty. Harold also contributed $2 to repair the standard he had broken.

Jacob Kreppel of Auburn street in a hurry to get home in his car after the fireworks at the rear of the high school drove to the left of the street and was immediately arrested by Officer Schirick. This was the only traffic arrest the police found it necessary to make as the hundreds of cars parked near the fireworks display were handled carefully by the drivers. As it was the first time Jacob had ever been arrested Judge Schirick suspended sentence.

Thursday evening Officer Bolkeley found Jack McQuinn, a tourist, drunk near the Rhinebeck ferry. This morning Jack denied it, and the hearing was adjourned to Saturday.

Jesse Johnson, a negro, arrested for the same offense by Officer Enright, was fined $5 but lacking the cash was remanded to the county jail.

The following speeders arrested over the holiday forfeited $15 cash bail by failure to appear today in court: Abe Tunisky of New York; Salvino Blascola of New York; Max Horekowitz, New York; Samuel Kohn, New York; William H. Bokoff of Brooklyn who only had $3 with him at the time he was arrested forfeited that amount.

AUTOS COLLIDED ON DOWNS STREET

It was reported to police headquarters Thursday afternoon that the automobiles of A. R. Elmendorf of Downs street and Thomas W. Lynch of the Elks Club on Fair street, had collided on Downs street. The police report states that both were traveling north and that Lynch ran into the Elmendorf car as the latter was turning to drive into his yard. Elmendorf claims he gave a signal that he was going to turn into the yard, but Lynch claims that he did not. Both cars were damaged but no one was hurt. Two women were in Lynch's car, which, according to eye-witnesses was traveling at a rapid clip. Lynch was driving a car he had hired.

Picnic Postponed

The picnic which was to have been held today by the Sunday schools of the First Reformed Church and Bethany Chapel at High Falls, was postponed on account of the rain. It will be held Monday next, the trip to be made in automobiles that will leave the First Reformed Church at 9 a. m. that day.

LOWER PRICES FOR SPACE BUT BIGGER KINGSTON EXPOSITION THIS AUGUST

Profiting by Experience, Committee Will Make Exhibit More Convenient and Entertainment Better—Last Year's Exhibitors Go In Again and New Ones Apply.

The demand for space at the Kingston Exposition to be held the last week in August, is very gratifying to the committee who has the affair in charge. Practically all of the exhibitors of last year are lined up and there are to be many new ones in and out of the city.

This year's Exposition will be much better than the one held last year as the exhibitors are planning more interesting exhibits, the entertainment will be much better and the general layout of the tents will be more convenient to view the various exhibits.

Every concern doing business in Kingston is invited to be represented at the Exposition, as it will attract several thousand people from the surrounding towns and cities, thus giving them a chance to see not only the goods that are made in Kingston but an opportunity to see and buy the merchandise sold in stores here. The single spaces are much lower in price than heretofore, with a generous reduction for exhibitors taking more than one space.

HUNT NEGRO AS GIRL'S SLAYER

Police Have Good Description of Black Who Sought Admittance To Home Near Where Dorothy Kauffman Was Slashed to Death.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

White Plains, N. Y., July 6.—The hunt for the murderer of Miss Dorothy Kauffman, 21 years old governess, slain while alone in the home of Magruder Craighead, New York broker for whom she worked, centered in White Plains today.

Authorities sought a negro, thought to be a resident of this place. He was seen near the Craighead home about the time Miss Kauffman was murdered last Tuesday.

The hunt, authorities pointed out, had plenty of time to escape, as Miss Kauffman's body, bearing more than a dozen knife wounds, was not discovered until yesterday.

Mrs. Harold L. Schlesinger, a neighbor of the girl's employer, told police today of seeing the suspected negro who had applied to her for work. She directed him to the home of another neighbor, a recent arrival.

Later the negro returned to the Schlesinger home, saying he had secured employment and said he was going to "bring his wife from White Plains."

He then asked to be admitted to the Schlesinger home for a cup of coffee. Mrs. Schlesinger refused. This, she said, was at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Authorities believe Miss Kauffman was slain about an hour later.

All available state, county and municipal police in Westchester county were engaged in a hunt for the negro today.

Mrs. Schlesinger gave police the first complete description of the negro they have had.

QUESTION WOMEN IN MAN'S MYSTERIOUS DEATH

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 6.—Three sweethearts of Frank A. Lacy, Syracuse railroad employee, whose mysterious death at First Lake, Old Forge, is under investigation today, will be questioned by authorities in their efforts to discern how he met his death.

One of these girls, Madeline Lake, granddaughter of an Indian medicine doctor, was with Lacy a short time before he disappeared from her camp at the lake, according to Coroner J. W. Graves of Horkimer. Lacy was madly in love with Miss Lake, it is said.

FIRST BALLOON TO RISE LANDS NEAR BUFFALO

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Buffalo, July 6.—Army balloon No. 1, manned by Lieut. Robert S. Olmstead and Lieut. W. Shoptaw, rose today in a field two and one half miles west of Marilla, fifteen miles west of Buffalo. It came down there last evening. The balloon which was the first to rise at Indianapolis in the International race, was in the air twenty-eight hours and fifteen minutes. It traveled 456 miles, which was the record at the time the balloon landed.

BRITAIN TO GET REPLIES TONIGHT

Belgians Also at Work on Plan to Lessen Tension Between France and Britain Over Reparations Tangle.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 6.—Written replies will be presented tonight by Belgium and France to the British questionnaire on their Ruhr and reparations policies. It was announced today at the foreign office.

At the same time the foreign office officially denied reports that England was using the French war debt to England as a pressure on France in the reparations negotiations.

Such an interpretation has been placed upon statements by Premier Stanley Baldwin in the House of Commons last night.

Brussels, July 6.—With relations between France and England strained almost to the breaking point, the Belgian cabinet today was at work on plans that may ease the critical situation. The cabinet feels its offer in mediation may show the way out of a dangerous impasse that apparently has been reached in the negotiations between Paris and London.

Premier Theunis, it is understood, plans to go to Paris immediately and confer with Premier Poincare. He is said to be anxious for a solution that will hasten the settlement of the reparations issue.

Belgium has already presented a tentative plan for a conference between France, England and Belgium with the prime ministers and foreign secretaries of the three countries seeking a way around the present obstacles.

BOY SHOT WITH "EMPTY" PISTOL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Syracuse, July 6.—With a bullet hole in his side, 14 years old Francis Riley, son of James W. Riley, number 221 King street, calmly walked two blocks to a doctor's office, where he collapsed in the doorway.

The victim of an "empty" revolver, the boy was removed to the Crouse-Ingers hospital. His condition is serious today.

Earl Cecile, 14, number 326 Gifford street, admitted to police he fired the shot which wounded the boy, is being held at police headquarters on an open charge pending the outcome of Riley's injuries.

PROHIBITION AGENTS HELD IN GIRL'S DEATH

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Malone, N. Y., July 6.—Striking the first blow at what residents call the "lawlessness and unwarranted assumption of authority by federal prohibition agents in this district," District Attorney Harold W. Main is conducting an investigation into the shooting of Miss Belle Baker, 18, of Fulton. Three agents today are held in bonds of $500 each to answer to charges of assault in the second degree, on July 7.

The men held are Robert D. Anzell, head of the local prohibition force, Merchant Phelps and E. A. Nesbitt, both deputies. They were arraigned before United States Commissioner Burns as the result of the investigation conducted by Mr. Main.

BIG CROWD SAW CITY FIREWORKS

Display Back of the Kingston High School Drew Thousands Thursday Evening—One of the Best Ever Shown in City.

Over two thousand people gathered on the grounds back of the Kingston High School Thursday evening to enjoy the city's display of fireworks. On foot and in automobiles the crowd began wending its way toward the grounds two hours before the display was scheduled to begin, and the early comers enjoyed the fine band concert.

This year the common council decided to expend the $300 appropriated for fireworks in one place instead of dividing it as in former years. As a result the display proved to be one of the best ever held in Kingston and lasted fully an hour.

The fireworks committee of which Alderman Macholdt was chairman had arranged to have the handstand erected and had also placed a large number of benches on the grounds, but long before the display started the benches were filled and the space back of them jammed with the crowd. While it was impossible to count the actual number who saw the fireworks a conservative estimate would place the number at 2,500, with perhaps that many more in parked autos at nearby vantage points.

The display consisted principally of set pieces such as the American flag, Niagara Falls, and spraying fountains. There were also a number of air pieces that were exceptionally beautiful.

The committee and especially Alderman Macholdt in whose ward the display was staged deserve great credit for the arrangements made. Alderman Macholdt spent almost the entire day Thursday in getting the display ready and helped the men erect the large number of set pieces.

Not an accident marred the display, and the crowd was very orderly. They had come prepared to enjoy the fireworks and the band concert and both were good. Chief of Police J. Allan Wood had arranged to have special policemen on duty at the grounds and they handled affairs in a creditable manner. There was a large number of automobiles parked on the high school grounds, and many also parked on nearby streets.

The display brought to Kingston a large number of out of town residents who motored in to enjoy it. The weather was ideal.

New Discovery Makes it Easy No Matter How Grimy They Are.

Housewives will welcome the new discovery, NACO, especially at this time of the year. Just a little of this marvelous liquid added to the wash water and your lace curtains turn out fresh and dazzling white as when new, with half the usual trouble. This is the preparation now used by textile manufacturers to give their white linen and cotton goods that brilliant lustrous white sheen you so admire in new materials. You can now bring it back every wash-day with the aid of NACO.

NACO is especially effective in removing stains and spots from table linen and cotton garments of every description. Fruit stains, coffee stains, perspiration stains, even ink stains, all disappear as though by magic with its use. And not only does it itself attack and loosen the grime and grease, but by softening the water it greatly increases the cleansing power of the soap. In this way, by eliminating the necessity of hard rubbing, it adds considerably to the length of wear of the clothes. In the scrub bucket NACO is almost as useful as in the wash-tub. The grease and grime on floors and walls and woodwork, as well as in wash-bowl, bathtub and sink, yield much more quickly when NACO is present to aid. You can get NACO at your grocer's—15 cents per bottle.—Advertisement.

Bertha Summers had her heart set on an operatic career. Today I saw in the paper that she had her seventh baby back in the old home town.

Art Henderson was fairly spoiling to be middleweight champion some day. He recently accepted a call to the pastorate of a prominent Boston church.

Thomas Thingle, on the other hand, was sure he wanted to be a missionary. Now he operates a large chain of poolrooms in a mid-western city.

Helen Holden, the clinging vine, blushing admitted that she thought matrimony the ideal career for a woman. She is now the very prim Miss Holden, teaching mathematics in a Chicago high school.

Fred Sterling, the prominent athlete of high school days, wanted to be a golf professional. I saw him today on his way to his plumbing shop.

Nellie Coyne could hardly wait to become a Red Cross nurse. Last week she took a position as assistant manager of the local dry goods house.

Walter Jones was all set to become a partner in his father's butcher shop. He now holds down the chair of Social Science at the state university.

Harry Alford, the class president, felt the call to higher things, and was going to pursue politics. He just bought a new Packard from his bootlegging profits.

Little Jay Bennie Butts, the incorrigible kid, said upon graduation that he didn't care much what he did. He was elected to the state senate last November.

Bravery.

He braced right up and asked the proud Young millionaire for her hand. You see, he owned a beach resort. And so, of course, he had the sand.

A traveler says you can scrape an acquaintance in ten minutes at any fashionable resort. You can, perhaps, if you are a barber.

Many of our troubles may begin with the stomach lining, as that doctor says, but more of them begin with the brake linings.

Great minds run in the same channel and so do little pigs run in the same path.

LEIBHARDT.

Leibhardt, July 5.—An ice cream social will be held in the Pine Camp Grove on Saturday evening, July 7. Plenty of home made cream and cake will be for sale from 5 o'clock on. Everybody welcome.

Mrs. Agnes Brown is entertaining a couple of city guests. Harry Ledman has his boarding house filled with boarders from the city.

Mrs. Norman Quick and her three children have been visiting with friends and relatives in Ellenville and Nanaucho.

Miss Minnie Brown has gone to Lake Minnewaska for the summer season.

CHURCH OF THE COMFORTER PICNIC TOMORROW

The annual picnic of the Church of the Comforter and the Bible school will be held at Forsyth Park on Saturday of this week. Plans have been made for an unusually fine time. The ladies of the Adult Bible Class will serve a lunch at a moderate price beginning at 12 o'clock and continuing on through the day. Ice cream, "Hot Dog" sandwiches, coffee, soft drinks and candy will also be on sale. Plans have also been made for some athletic contests and a baseball game. Those who are to furnish anything for the picnic are requested to get it to the church Saturday morning before nine o'clock. A truck will convey everything from the church to the park. Every member of the Bible school and parish and all friends are invited to take part in the picnic.

ACCORD.

Accord, July 5.—On Saturday evening, July 7th, at 8:15 o'clock at the Accord Odd Fellow's Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Eppes will present their two act play entitled, "Jack Norton's Dream." Refreshments and dancing after the play. Proceeds to be used for the benefit of the Community Singing Society. The cast of characters are as follows:

Zuleka.....Nellie Davenport
Gypsy Queen.....Bertha Coons
Barbette.....Caroline Christians
Benetto.....Ben Davis
Jim.....John Osterhoudt
Pete.....Townsend Osterhoudt
Gypsy Singers—Mrs. Dewitt Barley,
Mrs. Rancus Smith, Mrs. Lester Coddington

Jack Norton.....Hal Eppes
Mrs. Alma Morse will be at the piano.

Jeane Osterhoudt has purchased a new Ford touring car from Charles Anderson.

Ralph Markle was severely burned about the face at Lake Mohonk the first of this week. He was pouring gasoline into a tractor tank when gasoline which had leaked down into the hot metal of the engine caught fire and the flames leaped to his face.

Daniel E. Schoonmaker has a new Star truck.

Charles Anderson brought three new Ford cars over the road from Kearney, N. J. to Accord last Saturday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church will hold a quilting at the parsonage Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. All the ladies are invited. Those that cannot quilt can sew carpet rags.

The meeting of the "Far and Near" Society of the Reformed Church will be postponed until July 14th.

Mrs. L. M. Braam and son Leonard have returned from a two weeks visit with the Rev. and Mrs. A. T. Paxson of Spotswood, New Jersey.

There will be another food sale by the Ladies' Aid of the Reformed Church at the store of L. M. Decker on Saturday afternoon and evening, July 7th.

Mrs. Townsend Osterhoudt has been called to Canton, N. Y. on account of the death of her sister.

Defeat and victory are not always opposites; sometimes our defeat prove to be our greatest victories.

ONE CENT A WORD ADVS. BRING RESULTS

Urges Simplicity as Style Slogan

Prominent "Movie" Actress Says Personality Should Be Considered.

In a recent interview with a fashion writer, a prominent "movie" actress said: "Dress is a reflection of one's self. It is personality. For that reason, I don't believe in a general, a cut-and-dried style. Personality is not cut and dried. Some girls can wear the long-waisted dress; others, the short-waisted. Why should either type wear the kind that presents them in a poor way? Style enhances, else it isn't style."

"The girl earning her own living should refrain from indulging in extreme clothes of any sort during business hours. Plain clothes are so attractive when well fitting and well made."

"These days the girls earning their own living are in the majority. I would say. They can set the pace, if they wish. You have the '400' of so-called. Why not the '400' of business? What is the origin of style, after all? Eve wore a fig leaf. Her modiste was Nature. Eve's direct descendants wore fig leaves, too. Then, one day, one of the visionary descendants created her fig leaf on the sides. That was the beginning of the plait. Naturally, the other descendants wouldn't permit her to start something that brought all the men to her; they, too, created their fig leaves. One day another style reactionary rolled forth from the village and with a borrowed club killed herself a nice bear."

"When she made her appearance clad in superb bear skin, adroitly draped on her slim form, there was a general gasp from the stunned descendants. All the men flocked to the 'bear dresser.' Notice how with each change in style the men flock to the 'change'."

"Through the ages, styles have fluctuated from exaggerated simplicity to exaggerated lavishness. With increased population, competition to out-attract others has developed to such a keen pitch that only the artist of fashion reaches nearest perfection. The happiest compromise, then, for those of us too busy working to make dress our vocation, is to adopt simplicity for our slogan. Let the '400' take style by the horns, as it were, and set the pace for ourselves like the '400' do for themselves."

Cartwheel of Ribbon

Decorates Chic Hat

A cartwheel of twisted black moire ribbon enhances this very dainty hat of black haircloth, and worn with a summer neck fur.

Sweet Pea Frock in

Many Pastel Shades

Two-tone ribbon in many pastel shades may be combined into a frock as alluring as a bouquet of sweetpeas. The bodice is of bands of ribbon running horizontally across a chiffon foundation. The first band is tied into a large, soft knot near the left shoulder, the second nearer the center and so on, the last being on the extreme right. The ends of the ribbons fall from the shoulder over the arm in uneven lengths. The skirt consists of nothing but ribbons, all the same width, but each a different length, one end fastened to the bodice, the other hanging free, falling toward the knee and some coming to the ankles. Beneath the ribbons is a transparent foundation skirt of flesh-colored chiffon. The entire frock is Hawaiian and bizarre in effect, but represents the height of fashion with its predominance of ribbons.

Bird Cages.

Department stores as well as the bird stores and seed stores carry a very fine line of bird cages. Many of them are the simple kind that we have always been accustomed to, but there are many that surmount graceful standards of wicker. The cages themselves are wicker. These are very attractive. Besides being ornamental they are easily moved from place to place to accord with the light and temperature suited to the welfare of the bird.

Discussion Conquers Error. The great enemy of knowledge is not error, but inertness. All that we want is discussion, and then we are sure to do well, no matter what our blunders may be. One error conflicts with another, each destroys its opponent, and truth is evolved.—Buckley.

WHAT LEGION POSTS CAN DO

Contests, Participated in by Children, Bring Out Many Good Suggestions.

Carrying out a national program of activities in community affairs American Legion posts in many localities are holding essay contests among school children. The post at Monson, Maine, recently held a contest among children of the seventh and eighth grades on the subject, "What the American Legion Can Do to Better Our Town." The winning essay, written by Miss Anna Zimmerman, contains suggestions which Legion national officials believe worthy of adoption by other posts.

The essay, in part, follows: "The erection of a soldiers' monument would keep alive in the minds of the small boys' admiration of bravery and patriotism. This would also make the town look better and would show other towns that we had contributed our share towards defeating the Kaiser."

"Clean streets is another item of great importance. The children could be encouraged by the Legion to keep the streets and sidewalks free from all kinds of waste matter."

"Another thing of importance is a public playground where children of all ages could go and play any time they wish to. This playground would require a supervisor to keep the grounds in good condition and to introduce proper play. This would keep the children off the streets and therefore there would be less chance for accidents."

"A band stand would be a very nice thing for the town to have. We have a very nice band, but there is no good place to play outdoors, while if they had a band stand, they could give concerts at least one night in every week."

"A gymnasium would be of great value to the young people of this town. There is no place where sports can be enjoyed here. There could also be a public swimming place where children could learn to swim."

"Among some of the important things is to have a good hall which would add to the town a great deal, as there is no hall to have entertainments and socials given by the town unless they use the halls owned by private parties."

"The Legion men could open up the quarters that are now out of work, which would draw young men as well as men with families to come here and live."

"They could also help stimulate Americanism among the people of Monson by example and by patriotic entertainments."

LEGION EXTENDS GLAD HAND

Placing in Federal Position Member of Canadian Body One Example of Comradeship.

The hand of the American Legion is always extended in fellowship to veterans of the allied armies. In many cases this is done in daily association and in comradeship, and in others, in actual aid and financial assistance for the former comrades-at-arms.

T. T. Watson, a member of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada, is a firm believer in the friendliness of the Legion, according to a recent letter to T. C. Lopp, editor of the Veteran, the official publication of the Canadian organization. This letter found its way to National Adj. Lemuel Bolles of the American Legion and is an illustration of the splendid feeling existing between the organizations in the United States and Canada. Watson wrote:

"I started out in the Okanagan valley and came to the U. S. flat broke."

"Went into the American Legion and asked what was the chance for a member of the G. W. V. A. to get a job. They said the chance was fine and until they found me a job there was bed and board and an advance in money. Inside of 24 hours they placed me in a good U. S. Federal job, where I still am and likely to remain."

"I write this to show that the American Legion has the friendliest feeling for all Canadian returned men. Their motto is 'Every returned man a job,' and they seem to be carrying it into effect."

Watson made his application to the Tacoma (Wash.) post of the Legion, which placed him at work in a local hospital."

On Equal Terms.

A rookie who had been assigned to the cavalry much against his will approached the sergeant and remonstrated.

"Sarge," he objected, "I never rode a horse in my life."

"Oh, that's all right," countered the sergeant, easily, "We've got a horse that's never been ridden in his life. We'll start you off together."—American Legion Weekly.

Juvenile Scaiper.

Teacher: "I thought I told you to sit in the seat next to Mary Jones." Willie Wisecracker: "Yes, ma'am, ye did, but I sold it to Tommy Smith for a nickel."—American Legion Weekly.

Believe It or Not.

It is lucky to hear the cuckoo on the 1st of April, and foretells early marriage, and also fortunate to see the new moon if you are with your lover. Turn your money in your pocket looking at the moon and wish, and your wish will be fulfilled.

GREATER RESPECT FOR LAW

Legion Probation Plan Saves Many Detroit Ex-Servicemen From Stigma of Prison Terms.

Judge Thomas M. Cotter of the Recorder's court of Detroit, Mich., acting on suggestion of the American Legion, has successfully put into operation a probation plan, which has instilled in the minds of many former service men a high regard for the authority of the law.

The system was suggested in 1919, following discharge from military service of many thousands of men, of whom some were forced to appear in police court on minor charges of misdemeanors. Under the plan inaugurated many of these men were spared the stigma of a prison sentence, due to a far-sighted policy instigated by Judge Cotter.

Only the word of the man himself, with a promise to be a better citizen, and the word from some American Legion official is necessary to save the man from sentence. The plan works remarkably well, according to the reports of the court. Out of 847 former service men who appeared before Judge Cotter, only six or seven reappeared in his court to answer charges for violation of the statutes.

The plan has been adopted in every police court in the city of Detroit.

At the time of the institution of the probation system Detroit was filled with bolshevistic propaganda, and the success of the Legion system indicates the turning point of many former soldiers from disregard of law and order to a high respect for the law's authority.

FROM CONVICT TO COLONELCY

American Legion Acts to Obtain Pardon for Man Who Made Record in British Army.

Kenneth F. Thomas had been convicted and was serving a term in a Virginia penitentiary on a charge of bigamy at the time of the outbreak of the World war. While employed in one of the prison farm projects he escaped, made his way up to Canada, where he enlisted and was soon in active service.

He established a splendid war record, reaching a colonelcy before his discharge. During this time he kept the Virginia authorities informed of his movements, and promised that he would return and serve out his term as soon as the war was over.

Recently the man returned to Richmond and declared that he was ready to complete his prison term, admitting his identity, and acknowledging his war record. Delay in return, it is said, was due to the fact that for two years he has been in a hospital recovering from the effect of wounds.

His splendid record for bravery and attention to duty won high esteem of the British army officials. The American Legion has taken up the fight to obtain pardon or parole for the man, and the case has been presented to the governor of Virginia by interested Legionnaires.

Boy M. Hancock Among Missing.

Diligent search is being made for Roy M. Hancock, formerly a private in the Motor Transport Corps of the army, a World war veteran. Mrs. Hatlie Hancock of Chattanooga, Tenn., waited in vain for word from her son following the war. Government officials had him classified as a deserter.

Early in April Mrs. Hancock received word from the state hospital for the insane at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, that her son was a patient in that institution. On the heels of this information came word that he had escaped and no trace has been found of him since that time. Hancock is twenty-eight, five feet nine inches in height, dark hair, and has a horseshoe tattooed on his right arm below his elbow. In the emblem are the words "Good Luck." Following the government's discovery that the man was a mental patient and not a deserter, he was given an honorable discharge.

Donation of Memorial.

Officials of the Illinois department of the American Legion, state officials and prominent Chicagoans gathered recently at Cicero, a suburb of Chicago, for the unveiling of a monument to the soldier dead of the city. The monument was given by a Cicero real estate dealer and bears the names on bronze plates of those Cicero men who made the supreme sacrifice. Dedication exercises were under the direction of the Legion.

English Locomotives Light.

The largest locomotives in the world are those used on American railways. Some of these have a weight, including tender, of 400 tons, while the heaviest British locomotive weighs, in working order, only 140 tons.

SEA LIONS' CHATTER

"I hear these lion boys are so proud because they can roar and play basketball," said Maxine Samuel, Sea-Lion, "I have also heard that boys were very fond of basketball and could play it very well. But we can do things that play games, too, and we can catch fish, which is a lot more fun than basketball. We don't waste our time, though, in catching a ball, because it is much more fun to catch a fish."

"The lion boys say that no matter how hungry they are, they don't eat our food because it is not the water. No, the lion boys say that. So I think it is a lot better to catch a fish and eat it than to catch a ball and eat it."

"Of course," said Sidney Scudlon, "some animals may not like to catch fish."

"I cannot understand such a statement," said Samuel, Sea-Lion, "because I have seen lion boys in the zoo and they have had sandwiches with them. They have eaten and have not caught a fish. They don't have a fish in their hands and yet as I have seen them eat and catch it. Strange it is that they shouldn't, but such is the case."

"I heard," said Samuel, Sea-Lion, "that the lion boys are so proud of their food because of the fish they catch. It is a lot better to catch a fish and eat it than to catch a ball and eat it. They are also interested in the basketball. I have heard that they are a good creature, for they can give and receive and yet as I have seen them eat and catch it. Strange it is that they shouldn't, but such is the case."

"When the lion boys are much admired, with their lovely pink bodies. They really are beautiful. And their necks and legs are thin and dainty looking and they enjoy warm weather.

"There are the Griffin Vultures who were so cross last spring that they fought all the time—even with the males in their cages—and behaved very badly. They do not receive much admiration. The Secretary Bird is always looked upon with interest because of his long legs and because of the way he can suddenly start to run and before it seems as though he had seen him start he is away off."

"For he can run very quickly without a moment's thought about it. A Turkey Vulture came the other day from afar to call upon the Turkey Vulture who lives in the park, which was very exciting for the keepers and the people. They thought it a most interesting fact."

"There is the King Vulture from South America who dances for the visitors. He does that beautifully, looking his wings somewhat spread out and looking very fine, indeed."

"Yes," said Sidney Scudlon, "all that you say is true. For we hear the keepers talking and we hear the people talking as they stand outside our cages."

"The South American Condor, a cousin of the Vulture, always looks to me as if he were dressed up as some one most important and that he was with him a minute like that."

"You know how we've seen people really to go in parades pass by. They were dressed up to look like some old-fashioned person and they looked just as far from home as possible in their wonderful get-up of clothes and such things. You know the kind?"

"I don't said Samuel."

"I think the South American Condor is like that. But, dear me, here comes the lion. Now for luncheon."

"Now for luncheon," said Sidney Scudlon. And all the other Sea Lions agreed to eat.

"Let's eat it, lion!" said Samuel.

"Of course," said Sidney.

"My catch, I've got it. I'll get this one," shouted Samuel as he caught the first piece of fish the keepers threw and all the Sea Lions proved that they could catch in any basketball game where fish and not balls were thrown. At last they liked to have fish thrown at them."

"Cannibals and Other Folks."

"Father, what is the difference between cannibals and other folks?" questioned young Albert.

"Well, my boy, cannibals eat their own kind, as a rule other people do not. But as a rule other people do not eat their own kind."

EVERY DAY GOOD THINGS

In small families where roasts will be left over, it is a problem to use the meat acceptably with no waste.

Lamb Pot.Pie.
—Brown pieces of leftover lamb in butter, fat and
finely cut onions,
adding one cupful

each of celery, carrots and potatoes, all diced. Cover with water and cook until tender. Thicken the gravy with flour, season well and pour into a well-greased baking dish. Cover with baking powder biscuit and bake in a hot oven until the biscuits are brown.
Serve from the dish.

Duchess Potatoes.—Peel and boil enough potatoes to make a pint when mashed. Mix them with the yolk of an egg, two tablespoonsful of melted butter and the same quantity of cream. Turn this mixture on a pastry board and press it flat and smooth.
With a sharp knife cut the potato paste into squares of uniform size, remove with a paucike trowel to a greased baking sheet. Set in the oven to cook, sprinkle with grated cheese of any kind and bake a delicate brown.

Any leftover cooked lamb, put through the meat grinder, mixed with a bit of green pepper, a spoonful of may butter and enough salad dressing to moisten, will keep a week or more if in the ice box, making delicious sandwich filling.

Raisin Date Sandwiches.—Take two cupfuls of raisins, one cupful of dates, a little lemon juice. Mix the finely chopped fruit, moisten with the lemon juice and spread on slices of buttered bread.

Melon and Peach Cocktail.—Cut the melon into balls with a French potato cutter and the peaches into slices, then cut with fancy cutters—use one-third peaches and two-thirds melon. Arrange in tall sherbet glasses and pour over a syrup made of lemon, orange or pineapple juice with a tablespoonful of powdered sugar, thickened with a sprig of mint.

FIRPO A TWO TO ONE FAVORITE

Over Willard in Next Battle Of Behemoth At Jersey City July 12—Confident: He'll Then Kick Dempsey.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Long Beach, N. J., July 6.—No longer need Jack Kearns and Company, bewail the "business depression" which for two years, has put Jack Dempsey on the inactive list.

Suddenly the woods have become filled with worthy challengers. Every "knight of the tin can" tipping a beam at 175 pounds or more, is loudly clamoring for a battle date with the champion.

"Why couldn't they," the next good man who meets Dempsey will be champion of the world? Luis Angel Firpo, senior from Argentine explained today.

Firpo believes he is the next king of the heavens. He is in training here for his July 12 meeting with Jess Willard, former champion. The fight will be staged at Tex Rickard's Jersey City arena. It will be a no decision affair.

Firpo has affixed his name to a contract to battle Dempsey under Rickard's promotion in the event his defeats Willard. The Argentine mauler says Dempsey has also signed.

"I'll knock Willard for a row of Toedles," Firpo predicted.

The senior insists Harry Wills, the brown puncher, will not be given a match with the champion until after either he or Willard have exercised their preferred claim.

Firpo is under the direction of Jimmy Delorest who conditioned Dempsey for his championship victory over Willard.

Delorest is attempting to teach Firpo to box. He has a job on his hands. The "Bull of the Pampas" pushes the wickedest right in the boxing game today. Whether delivered from a position six inches away, or from the full swing it is a man killer. His left is just so much added weight.

Firpo will enter the ring against Willard at top weight 215 pounds. He looks heavier.

Willard will be down to 235—the lowest he has ever made.

"I won't need much of a left for Willard," Firpo insists. "I can take them—all he's got. I'm going in for an early knockout."

Willard has expressed the same opinion of his ability against the son.

The fight is expected to draw a half million dollar house. Tickets totaling $300,000 have already been sold.

Firpo is a two to one favorite.

MARDI-GRAS

By CECILIA WEXLER

(C. 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
"A W. PAM, have a heart. My hair will be all over the road if you don't slow down!"

But if Pam heard, she paid no attention to her friend's old-fashioned worry about flying hair.

As she heard the whirr of the wind in her ears, Ray felt a shiver race down her already cold spine. "But, Pam," she shouted, "you were going to tell me—"

For an instant Pam's eyes met hers. Gradually she slowed down and with a little laugh she said, "You're not enjoying this. Forgive me, dear." Ray settled back in relief. For five minutes they rode on in silence, Pam unsteadily keeping the slow pace and thinking how to begin what she wanted to say.

"Ray?"

"Do you remember the Mardi-Gras last year at the school? Of course you do. Everybody does; it was such a wonderful time. Wonderful. And yet—that's what I'm to tell you about. When we were children—remember, Ray, how we used to smuggle and read those forbidden novels; and secretly pass our opinions on them; and how we vowed that we'd marry for love only; and how I said that I would know my man the instant I met him; and how I'd know I loved him the instant I felt his presence?"

"Silly, weren't we? And yet, it's a funny thing, but that's just how it happened. It was at the Mardi-Gras ball. It was during the 'cut-in' dance that I saw a tall man, heretofore an unknown, come toward me, tap my partner on the shoulder, and gather me close in the dance."

"How good it was! We didn't bother to talk. We just made a business of dancing. We went so perfectly together. When some one tried to cut in, we disregarded him. Then he led me out on the lawn, found an alcove, fixed the cushions, and sat down."

"It was all done so naturally, and I didn't even know him! We didn't talk much, and you know what a chatterer I am. We just sat there, and you know how I hate moon gazing! I felt so at ease, it seemed so natural for me to be there, that I never thought of the wasted music in the hall, and I didn't miss the rest of the excitement."

"But it didn't last long. We were intruded upon by another masquerader who handed 'him' a telegram. Recognized your costume, Jack," he said. "The boy was pacing you, so I offered to find you. Hope it isn't serious."

"But it was serious. His father was dying, and he was called home immediately. Putting me in his palm, Jimmy's care, he rushed away. I've never seen him since. All I know is that his name is Jack, but there are hundreds of Jacks. From what Jimmy told me as we walked back to the hall, I know his home is in Tennessee."

"One year ago tonight the Mardi-Gras brought me the meeting of Jack. No wonder I'm blue. I hope you don't mind my using you for a confidante."

For the first time Ray had no advice or comfort to offer her friend. It was strange to see Pam so subdued, sorrowful. She didn't like it. She longed to see her as she had been before; the breeze blowing the chestnut curls away from the rose-tinted cheeks, the sparkling eyes and the sweet smile on the half-parted lips.

"For goodness sake, Pam, step on her!"

Pam's face miraculously broke into a vision of happiness. "You, dear," she cried, "you always manage to say the right thing." And Pam stepped on her.

Instantly it seemed as if they left the earth. Again objects became blurred and distant. Mile after mile was left behind. The road was becoming narrower. Now and then they came upon an unexpected turn, but Pam managed beautifully.

"Pam, dear," Ray put an affectionate hand on her arm. "I'm glad you told me."

"So am I!" Pam took her eyes off the road for an instant, and in that time they came to another sharp bend. A monster of a machine loomed before them. Pam made for the brakes, but it was too late. With a crash the two cars met.

When Pam awoke, the dusk enveloped the trees about her. Like Mardi-Gras, she thought. Then she felt sure, for she saw the face that had smiled down on her during the "cut-in" dance.

"Jack," she murmured, "tonight's Mardi-Gras."

"Yes, dear."

Then, as she remembered more clearly, she asked, "But you here. How come?"

"You struck my car," he said smiling. "But we should worry?"

"And Ray?"

"Getting along famously with Jimmy," he said.

"Oh," she sighed. Then, "Anybody hurt?"

"Only you,"

"Oh, me! I'm all right." Pam jumped up.

"Here, lean on me. You'll fall."

"I've already fallen," Pam answered. "And I don't even know your name!"

"What's in a mere name, when the time's Mardi-Gras?"

Bad Case.

Mr. Terr—Dorath, what do match-wild Bruders Snooks? What 'zeas do he peah to be flitted wild, in yo' humbel opinion?"

"Chronic chicken stealin' complicated wild birdshot in de back, sah."—The Watchman-Examiner.

Hatch Eggs in Decaying Plants.

The Australian brush turkey lays its eggs on the top of a heap of decaying vegetation, which it has piled up to a height of fifteen feet or so. The eggs are laid at a depth of five or six feet, and left to hatch themselves by the warmth generated by the decaying matter.

President Harding Calls Roosevelt "Sentinel on the Ramparts of the Republic"

Three notable Americans received national recognition for their public services when President Harding, with impressive ceremony, recently presented the Gold Medal of Honor awarded by the Roosevelt Memorial Association to Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, Professor Henry Fairchild Osborn and General Leonard Wood.

The bestowal took place in the East Room of the White House before a distinguished audience which included Mrs. Harding, Mr. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, Secretary Hughes, Secretary Wallace, Secretary Work, Secretary Davis, Secretary Hoover, Ambassador George Harvey, Ambassador Henry D. Fletcher, Senator George Wharton Pepper, and Will H. Hays, former Postmaster-General. The recipients of the medals were chosen for this honor by the members of the Roosevelt Memorial Association because of their service to the American people in three different fields of activities: integrity, peace and with the career of the late Roosevelt. Miss Schuyler, presented the medal for "the promotion of the welfare of women and children," Professor Osborn for "the preservation of the study of natural history," and General Wood for "the promotion of the study of the history of the United States."

who is eighty-six years old is the great-granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton. On account of illness she was unable to receive the medal in person.

Links Roosevelt with Hamilton. "I think I would have felt an especial satisfaction," said President Harding, "in bestowing a mark of recognition upon a great granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton. How curious, and impressively the fact of her descent and this mark of recognition, connect up the outstanding founder in the making of the Republic with one who later became a sentinel on the ramparts, ever ready to defend its ideals and liberties. There is nothing in life comparable to the inspiration of service, and I would like you to say to the recipients of this medal that it is a very great pleasure not only to present it, but to know the names of the great-grandchildren of the great-grandfather of the Republic."

The medal of General Wood, who was present in the Philippines was presented to him by Colonel Charles H. B. Smith.

Paved Yards Save Feed and Labor

Floor Is Sanitary and Does Away With Unsightly Mud Holes in Barnyards.

No farm is complete without a concrete feeding floor as part of its equipment. It is hard to estimate the amount of feed that has been lost and wasted through being fed in the mud. A paved feeding floor is sanitary and does away with the unsightly mudholes so common to barnyards.

Easy to Build.

Concrete barnyard pavements, as shown in the illustration, are easy to build, and the man who has never had experience with concrete can acquire what is necessary in a short time by carefully following a few instructions. Not all of the pavement need be built at one time. A strip 20 feet wide is enough for a beginning. Additional strips can be added as desired.

Plan for Paving.

In paving a feeding yard with concrete, first grade the site so that it is practically level. If the drainage is not good, drain the site should be laid. A sub-base of several inches of gravel or cinders is sometimes advantageous. The concrete should be mixed in the proportion of 1 part of cement, 2 parts of sand and 3 of pebbles or broken stone. A thickness of four inches is the allowable minimum and five or six inches is safer, especially where heavy loads are likely to be put on the floor. The surface should be made to slope toward one corner, with a pitch of not more than one-fourth inch per foot, and it should be finished with a wood-float, which leaves a gritty surface that can be easily cleaned, yet affords a firm footing for the stock. After the concrete has been laid it should not be used for at least two or three weeks.

The following table shows the amount of materials required to build pavements of various areas, using one-two-three mix and a thickness of four inches:

Square Ft.	Sacks of Cement	Cu. Yds. Sand	Cu. Yds. Pebbles
300	25	2	3
400	33	3	4
500	42	4	5
1,000	83	8	10
1,500	124	12	15

Sweet Corn Is Superior for Feeding in Summer

In making plans for summer feeding, the value of sugar corn should not be overlooked. In certain dairy sections where its worth is recognized, it is not unusual to find almost every dairyman planting a moderate-sized patch with which to meet the mid-summer period when pasturage is short and green feed at a premium. In the choice of the variety to plant it is well to choose the later maturing sorts such as Country Gentleman and Evergreen. The earlier varieties will mature as a rule before there is real need for them in dairy feeding. The earlier varieties of sweet corn are lacking in stalk and leaf as compared with the larger and later sorts.

Fowls in Orchard Kill Many Injurious Insects

Any fruit which grows high enough to be out of reach of the hens is benefited by their presence. Better crops are produced and greater growth is in evidence. Some years ago Cornell university made a test which showed very conclusively that the presence of chickens in an orchard did more good towards killing injurious insects than all the liquid sprays that could be applied.

SALMON MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

Efforts Being Made to Trace Their Wanderings.

QUEER TRAITS LITTLE KNOWN

Silver tags have been attached to the dorsal fins of numerous salmon hatched in Canadian waters, according to dispatches from Ottawa, in an effort to trace their wanderings and to fathom some of the unsolved mysteries in the lives of these important fishes.

Some of the queer traits of salmon, known to few of the million who eat these fish from tin cans, are told in a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. The bulletin quotes Robert F. Griggs, who in his book, "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes," tells of finding a run of salmon in a partially asphoked stream in the heart of a region devastated by the great eruption of Katmai volcano in Alaska. The observations were part of a comprehensive scientific study of the region made directed by the National Geographic society.

"Everywhere we kept a sharp lookout for salmon," says Doctor Griggs, "but found none until 1917, when we discovered one little brook in which red salmon were running in considerable numbers. This stream did not appear different in any way from a score of others which coursed down the mountain side to join Katmai river. But although we could find no fish in any of the other streams, we caught them here almost every time we came by, taking altogether about fifty in the course of a month.

Huge Fish in Tiny Streams. "Readers unfamiliar with the spawning habits of the salmon may be surprised to learn that fish two feet long could be found in a stream only a few inches deep; but the initiated will recognize that there is nothing unusual in such an occurrence. It is well known that some species of salmon work their way up into brooks so shallow that their backs stick out before they deposit their eggs."

Commenting on the remarkable "homing instinct" of salmon, especially the sockeye, Doctor Griggs wrote:

"At Brooks Falls in the outlet from the lake of the same name, at the proper season one may watch the salmon as they jump clear of the water and ascend the falls. Here we stood for hours, held by the fascination of one of the most wonderful sights afforded by the animal kingdom, as the endless procession of fish kept leaping high in the air, over the falls.

"Never did a second lapse between jumps. Sometimes as many as six fish were in the air at once. The jump appeared to require their full powers; none made the attempt except at the lowest notch in the falls, and none jumped clear over in a way to suggest that they could have gone much higher if necessary. Many of the leaps were so wide of the mark as to give the impression that they were not serious attempts, but rather in the nature of reconnaissances—efforts to learn the best place for the ascent. Often the fish struck themselves on the sharp rocks. Among those below the falls were many terribly lacerated by such accidents—so far gone that there was little probability of their ever succeeding in the leap.

"Perhaps the most interesting feature of the whole performance is the instinct that urges the salmon over the falls. How can they tell that there is another lake above? Yet by some means they are unerringly guided to the outlets of lakes above, for they do not run to other streams. Why should they seek the upper lake, when the waters they have just passed through would serve as well, as is attested by the fact that they are perfectly satisfactory to other thousands of their brethren?

Return to Spot Where Hatched. "Professor C. H. Gilbert of Stanford university, who knows the habits of the salmon better than anyone else, tells me there is good evidence that the individual salmon returns to the particular water in which it was hatched. As indicated by the anomalous run observed in a tributary of Katmai river they are apparently able to find, not merely the same general locality, but by some instinct are guided back to the particular spot where they began life. The mysterious sense by which they choose their way among waters apparently indistinguishable is quite incomprehensible to us.

"If, like the bird migrations, it were a journey undertaken every year during the life of the fish, it would not be so remarkable, for the old fish could teach the young the path. But the salmon make the trip only once, at the end of their allotted span. When they have spawned they turn over and die, leaving windows of rotting carcasses on the shore.

"Their only previous experience with the stream was when as small fry they passed down from the spawning ground and out to sea. Can it be that they retain something analogous to memory of the 'landmarks' passed on their one previous journey? And, finally, why such frantic effort when all is to end so soon? These questions we may not answer. All we can say is, that these wonderful instincts, though leading to the death of the individual, are clearly to the advantage of the species, whose perpetuation is thereby assured."

Heavy Snowfalls.

At some places in the Sierra Nevada and the Cascade mountains from 30 to 40 feet of snow falls during the winter months. At Summit, Cal., which has an elevation of about 7,000 feet, there has been recorded 60 feet of snow in a single season and about 25 feet in a single month.

DOG HAS SENSE OF DIGNITY

What in Man is Known as "Bluff" is Quite Highly Developed in the Canine Race.

Once past their puppyhood all dogs have a sense of dignity and self-respect.

The other day I watched a small boy tickle a terrier's nose with a straw, says a writer in the London Daily Mail. The dog sniffed, sneezed and turned his head aside. When the operation was repeated he rose, stretched himself languidly—as if he was moving merely of his own accord—and slowly walked away. There was contemptuous disdain in every movement.

It is this ever-present sense of dignity which induces "bluff" in a dog, a quality which one might think belonged solely to man.

The ardent cowards of the canine race, with the exception of "pampered darlings," and broken-spirited pariahs, are not so shameless as to ignore the opinions of others. Even though clearly anxious to avoid a fight, they make some pretense of bravery or disdain.

All this may be seen any day in the street when dogs meet to "take stock" of each other. But the best illustration possible was afforded recently by a litter of beagle puppies.

Rajah, a big, strong puppy, was secretly chicken-hearted. Restless was small and weak, but indomitably ferocious. In the first clash of arms Rajah "put up a show" and got severely handled. Now, if restless openly covets Rajah's bone the last named seems suddenly to lose interest in it. He deserts the bone but retains his dignity.

No one who gives a dog's nature the smallest amount of study can fail to be struck by its resemblance to man's. The value set on public opinion is only one example of many. A dog can be anxious, amazed, hopeful, frightened, inquisitive, ashamed, sad, loving, jealous, interested—even amused. The human gamut of emotions is not much greater.

That a dog has a sense of humor is most widely doubted. But there has been a terrier who could actually smile baring his teeth in a manner quite different from a snarl.

He was chained up in a yard where a number of fowls infuriated him by stealing his food.

One day their feeding time coincided and he had cleaned out his high pot before the fowls arrived. He then lay motionless in the sun with one eye half open, watching a cockerel nervously approach. At last, with great effort and much trembling, the cockerel craned his neck and looked down into the pot.

The terrier tapped the ground twice with his tail, smiled and closed his eye.

Mind's Power Over the Body.

There is no doubt of the existence of a certain basis of scientific knowledge for the present vogue of the assumption of the importance of mind's influence over body, and of the importance of the unconscious element in mind. But, of course, this vogue is chiefly the result of extravagant claims unjustified by the facts yet known. Vernon Kellogg writes in the North American Review. These claims are pressed by persons who are not even acquainted with the scientific facts that give any basis at all to them. Too often they are deliberate attempts to exploit the popular interest. In other cases they are not dishonest in intention; only dishonest through careless disregard of the obligation resting on any one who offers to point the way to health of having scientific fact as a basis for this advice. When I asked M. Coue for some proofs of his claims to be able to do what he thinks—probably quite honestly—he and any of us can do by his methods, he drew from an inner pocket a small packet of letters, evidently much used, and handed me one or two to read. Each writer said that she had got well. It was a naive reply on M. Coue's methods. M. Coue considers them to mean everything I cannot.

In State of Ignorance.

A tall, smiling negro, who said he lived in Chicago, stood before Judge Delbert D. Wilmoth in city court a few days ago to answer to a charge of vagrancy.

"On what street do you live?" Judge Wilmoth asked.

"I just can't remember the name of that street, your honor," replied the prisoner.

"Well, does it run east and west or north and south?" queried the judge.

"Well, sir, I'm not positive which way it does run. I never was no good on directions."

"You should be in vaudeville," Judge Wilmoth said when he ordered the man discharged.

"Just where is that town, Judge?" asked the negro. "Seems like I don't remember I ever heard of that place before"—Indianapolis News.

Blind People Read Much.

People who have lost their sight read more as a class than their sighted neighbors, according to records of the book exchange department of the California state library, which were made public by Milton J. Ferguson, state librarian.

Despite the fact that many of the blind have never learned to read by the raised-letter system and hence do not read at all, Ferguson stated the state library collection of 14,937 books for the blind is insufficient. The 1,200 blind people in California keep the collection constantly in circulation.

Many of the blind patrons of the library take out an average of five books a week, the state librarian said.

Dogmatic Man Frequently Wrong.

Nothing can be more unphilosophical than to be positive or dogmatic on any subject; and even if excessive scepticism could be maintained it would not be more destructive to all just reasoning and inquiry. When men are the most sure and arrogant they are commonly the most mistaken.—Hume.

STUDEBAKER

The Studebaker Light-Six

was designed by Studebaker engineers and manufactured complete in the NEW STUDEBAKER PLANTS AT SOUTH BEND, IND., which are notable in design, size and equipment for efficient and economical manufacture.

The South Bend Plants contain 4,875,000 square feet of floor space.

They employ 12,000 persons.

They cost $33,250,000.

The South Bend Forge Plant cost $4,000,000, which alone is more than the total assets of many automobile companies.

And then there are:

The machine shops which cost $7,000,000.

The stamping plant which cost $4,500,000.

The new foundries which will cost over $2,000,000.

The power plants which cost $2,500,000.

The assembly and stock plants which cost $5,000,000, as well as closed and open body plants, spring shops, etc.

Studebaker plants, in cost and size, are the second largest of the world's automobile plants.

Studebaker is the second strongest financially of the automobile manufacturers of the world.

These facts show why it is possible for Studebaker to produce the Light-Six—a truly remarkable car—and sell it for less than a thousand dollars.

In actual car value per dollar of price the Light-Six is in a class by itself. No prospective buyer of an automobile should decide on anything until he has seen and driven this car.

It is backed by a corporation with $85,000,000 of actual net assets and a 71-year reputation for honest product and fair dealing.

Vast Resources Make Possible High Value at Low Price in Studebaker Light-Six

Studebaker's vast resources are utilized to manufacture (not assemble) the Light-Six complete in the newest and most modern large automobile plants in the world.

The Corporation's resources, consisting of $85,000,000 of actual net assets, including $45,000,000 of plants, make it possible for Studebaker to offer a six-cylinder car, at less than $1,000, that is emphatically superior in design, construction, performance, comfort and dependability, to any car within hundreds of dollars of its price.

By complete manufacture, Studebaker not only guards the quality of each part, but saves the middlemen's profits, with the result that no other make of car ever built, by anyone, at any price, represents so great a dollar-for-dollar value as the Light-Six.

Evidence of its mechanical superiority is found in its practical freedom from vibration. This is accomplished by the perfect balance of the motor. Perfect balance is obtained largely through the complete machining of all surfaces of the crankshaft and connecting rods. This requires 61 precision operations.

This method is followed exclusively by Studebaker on cars at this price. In fact, very few other cars have this feature, and their prices are from three to ten times as great as that of the Light-Six.

It is significant, therefore, that the sale of more than 80,000 Studebaker cars during the first six months of this year broke all records.

Buyers are justified in expecting more for their money in a Studebaker than in any other car.

LONDONERS PAY FOR DOCK STRIKE

Prices of Food Jump Sharply—Spread of Strike, Even to Railroads, Is Feared If Cut in Wages Is Insisted Upon.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
London, July 6.—Striking dock workers continued in a stubborn mood today and there were no indications that they would heed the orders of their leaders to return to work next Monday.

With the threat of a food shortage facing many communities, prices are already soaring. Some commodities have advanced a third in price in London, which has food stores on hand sufficient for two weeks.

In other centers where the supplies are not so large the price situation is worse. The waste of perishable food supplies, piled high on the docks, is the most serious feature in the situation.

Eighteen thousand men are now out in London, and the total strikers in all English ports is estimated to be more than 50,000.

Many stevedores and porters have joined the dock workers and the situation is further complicated by the threat of railway employees not to handle any cargoes unloaded by non-union workers.

Today promised to be the most critical in the strike as thousands of dock workers here who are still at work are scheduled to vote on the question of joining the walkout.

The strikers are demanding a government investigation to determine whether living costs justify the shilling a day reduction in wages that precipitated the strike.

Railway workers are threatening not to accept a similar reduction and another great strike is not improbable although the rail union leaders are urging arbitration.

IMPROVEMENTS IN LATEST BATTERY CHARGING MACHINE

The Vanderlyn Battery Company, local agents for the Exide battery, has just installed one of the latest machines for the charging of storage batteries whereby batteries are charged in 8 hours without any harm being done to the battery. This is accomplished through the installation of a Roth Brothers Company low voltage high amperage machine. These machines are being installed in all of the big charging stations and although the machine has been used in Newburgh, Middletown, Albany, Liberty, Saugerties and other cities the machine installed by Mr. Vanderlyn is the first in this city.

By using this latest type machine it is possible to tell in from 3 to 5 minutes if a battery is out of order and in need of repairs instead of twenty-four hours as by the old method. By using a low voltage high amperage current it is impossible to overheat or injure a battery and the battery is almost charged in 24 hours while the finishing touches on the battery required about 48 hours to bring it up to standard. On account of the low voltage used, it is impossible to overheat a battery while it is being charged. A double commutator generator operated by a motor generates the current and through automatic control prevents injury to the batteries being charged.

THE SECRET SIX

Taken from the Notebook of an Old Detective
by Charles Edmonds Walk
And With Names and Places Hidden Published as a Proof That Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction

This story thrives with realism in the world's narrowest meaning. It is a faithful rendering of an authentic experience in the career of a high official of a detective agency whose name is a household word throughout the English-speaking world. Real names of persons and places are sometimes disguised. In all other respects the amazing, often thrilling, always gripping facts are recorded just as they happened.

"A million and a half," observed Felix Hazard. "That is a whole lot of money."

"Huh!" grunted the fat, heavy-jowled man who sat glowering at him through a pair of gold-rimmed nose-glasses. "A whole lot more than the Transcontinental Express company can afford to lose, let me tell you."

Hazard's lean, intense visage was frankly incredulous. He glanced at the inscrutable countenance of his burly chief (the four were in the latter's room at the Sutherland Detective agency), and then at the fourth member of the party—a young man, tall, slender, very fair and anemic looking, and fastidiously attired.

"A million and a half," repeated Hazard. "Robbing express wagons and vans, it would appear, has been elevated from the level of petty larceny to the lofty rank of an exact science."

"Very true," admitted the president of the Transcontinental. "But it happens that we are up against the real thing in robbery. Such outrages can be perpetrated only by a well-organized gang of intelligent rascals."

"Besides, don't think for a minute that they are going it blind; they never take anything but valuable packages."

"Is that true?" Hazard suddenly asked.

"True!" the other stormed. "Haven't I every reason for knowing how true it is?"

"I'll tell you in a few words," went on the latter as soon as his choleric subsided. "How it was possible for our losses to mount up to such a prodigious amount within the period of little more than nine weeks. The scoundrels are operating all over the country. Stuff stolen in one city is shipped to another to be disposed of—here, there, everywhere. It is gone before we can get track of it. A few weeks more at the same rate and the Transcontinental will be on the rocks."

"How do you know that is their method?" asked Hazard.

"It is obvious. Of the thousands of dollars' worth of plunder taken from our wagons right here in Chicago not a dollar's worth has been traced by the police; nothing has shown up through the regular crook channels. Or else the police are too stupid to find anything."

"Has any other company besides yours suffered?"

"It is so it has kept the matter confidentially quiet."

The pale young man, who so far had been indifferently attentive, even bored, now interposed in a listless, drawing voice.

"They naturally would, you know," was his comment.

Hazard contemplated him a moment and considered the two, father and son; Ferdinand Butler, head of one of the country's largest corporations, and Harry Butler, manager of the concern's most important office. He addressed the son:

"You, I presume, personally took the matter of the Chicago losses to the police. What have they done?"

Harry Butler lit a cigarette and dipped away the match. "Nothing," he replied unemotionally.

For some time the burly chief had remained silent and motionless behind the barricade of his desk. He now spoke.

"I suppose you appreciate the fact, Mr. Butler, that this is a pretty big undertaking. Leave the matter with us a few days. You shall hear from us shortly."

It may seem odd that a Sutherland operative should not only be a guest at an elaborate Lake Shore society function, but, by reason of her beauty, grace and charm, that she should attract more attention than any of the scores of other ladies who represent the flower of Chicago's, as well as some other cities', most exclusive and fashionable sets.

This signal honor, if so it may be regarded, fell to Helen Bertel on the night following the conference with the Butlers.

At Helen's request no men were present save where introductions were absolutely unavoidable. As may be imagined, more than one of the men gained his point with the hostess, and the girl was obliged to be agreeable for a time, then tactfully, as she told Felix Hazard afterwards, make a "graceful getaway."

One of these males, however, she seemed to find especially amusing. Indeed, Helen laughingly told her hostess as much when that lady offered to relieve her of her embarrassing presence. Mrs. Miller-Crosby was herself a shrewd woman.

"My dear!" she protested in a horrified whisper. "You don't suspect. Why, he is Harry Butler, son of Ferdinand."

Said Helen soberly:

"I sincerely trust that no occasion will arise for me to suspect anyone here. It simply occurred to me that by attaching one man tonight I can avoid seeming rude to others; Mr. Butler is less dull than some I have been obliged to be pleasant to, that is all."

Observing that Harry Butler was waiting close by, she excused herself and rejoined him.

"Let's get out of this crowd," said he. "Here—this way." And he guided her deftly through the outer fringe of dancers.

In the conservatory they found a seat amongst a screen of palms and hanging baskets of orchids. Butler laughed nervously.

"What do you think," he abruptly began, "there are detectives here tonight—right among the guests, by Jove! Nobody has any idea who they are. . . . Why, you might be one yourself!"

Helen was so taken unawares that she could not find words for a moment, so surveyed the other in silence. She knew that another Sutherland operative, Ferndale, was present tonight, and wondered whether he had been indiscreet.

But Harry Butler revealed the source of his information.

"Jack told me," (Jack was Mr. Miller-Crosby, whom Helen mentally blessed.) "But he wouldn't point 'em out. Mighty mysterious about it. Told me not to mention it to anybody else."

The girl had recovered herself. She favored the young man with one of her rare smiles.

"And of course you haven't," said she dryly.

"Why, no; of course not. Only to you. You know, there's been no big, swell affair this winter unless some body's jewels have been stolen. Raffles, you know."

For some unexplained reason Helen was on tenterhooks, alert, keyed up with expectancy, as if something uncommon were about to happen.

And at that very instant something did happen. A woman screamed—a piercing, agonizing scream that thrilled above the murmur of voices, above the sound of dancing feet and the throbbing strains of the orchestra.

The two started from their bench. The scream was near at hand, just inside a doorway opening upon a short gallery that connected with the ladies' dressing-room. It rose in a climax of mortal terror. Then came the sharp, electrifying crack of an automatic pistol.

One—two—three—four shots. . . . A clatter of running feet. . . . Silence.

While the outburst still thrilled every hearer Helen was hastening to the dressing-room. Within that brief period the tumult had begun and ended. Her companion was left behind, forgotten. Dumbfounded men were pouring in from the supper and ball rooms. But she was just an instant ahead of the first arrival; just in time to witness what the others missed.

In the corridor a man running toward the conservatory collided with her in a headlong fashion that nearly swept her from her feet. In the flashing vision she had of him she saw that he was dressed formally; that, save for two extraordinary details, he might have been any one of the male guests.

But his right hand gripped a big automatic pistol, and his features were concealed by a black mask.

She recoiled. Harry Butler, then, with a little pang of alarm; yet, he must take his chances. And surely, after the shooting, he would not allow a masked man to pass him in the conservatory without making an effort to stop him.

Her delay was only momentary. In the dressing-room she first noticed that a window was wide open, through which an icy wind was billowing the curtains. Upon the floor lay a man and a woman, motionless, apparently lifeless. The woman she did not know; but the man was Ferndale, the other Sutherland operative. His right hand still clutched a blue-barreled automatic.

Helen turned first to him, where two or three of the men joined her, and knelt beside him. A larger group of both men and women gathered excitedly about the woman on the floor. Experienced in such emergencies, the girl's deft fingers soon ascertained that Ferndale was not dead; that the blood clotting one side of his head was merely from a torn scalp where a steel-jacketed bullet had plowed its way.

Even while thus engaged she was not insensible of the agitated ejaculations and disconnected remarks from the second group.

"Mrs. Charters. . . . Murdered!"

Who is that man? . . . He's dead too. . . . Pistol still in his hand. . . .

The men were now questioning Helen regarding what had happened. "I was not here," she explained calmly, but rapidly. "I happened to be near and arrived first. But it is plain that a robbery has been committed, and that this man, in trying to protect the victim, was nearly murdered. One of the villains is still in the house. He ran past me toward the conservatory, where I left Mr. Butler."

A man went over to close the window which opened upon the porte-cochere roof. At the very instant he raised his hands to the sash an excited outcry came up from below. The words were plainly distinguishable inside the room.

"Here's one of 'em! . . . Fell from the roof. . . . Dead! . . ."

III.

From the Miller-Crosby ball Helen Bertel brought two important clues. The first of these was a torn scrap of newspaper that had been found in Mrs. Charters' bodice. It suffices to say of this that it afforded a striking example of the thieves' resourcefulness in availing themselves of a clandestine flirtation to lure Mrs. Charters to the ladies' dressing-room at a specified time. The note was merely a scrawled line, signed with the initials of a well-known name that had frequently been coupled with the dashing and wealthy young widow's.

Ferndale, with his eyes zealously upon the costliest jewels at the ball, was particularly solicitous of Mrs. Charters' $10,000 diamond dog-collar. Without, of course, imagining its cause, as the hour for the tryst in the dressing-room approached her increasing nervousness and agitation aroused his curiosity, and when she slipped furtively away he followed to the very door.

Thus he heard the first sounds of tumult and struggle, and entered in time to confront two masked men. The three promptly commenced a three-cornered fusillade. Ferndale believed—which, a few minutes later, was discovered to be true—that he had wounded the man who plunged through the window.

Mrs. Charters was insensible upon the floor when he arrived, her rare diamond ornament already reaved from her throat. Otherwise she was not in the least injured.

The masked man who collided with Helen doubtless got rid of the telltale face covering and mingled with the guests; for Harry Butler maintained that he never even so much as saw an armed masked man in the conservatory.

The most interesting clue, from Hazard's viewpoint, had to do with the man who fell into the snow from the porte-cochere roof.

It transpired that he was not killed nor even seriously injured; but before he recovered Helen fished from one of his pockets a curious bit of paper. It was the peculiar particulars which this sheet bore that suggested the appellation "The Secret Six," by which later came to be distinguished one of the most notorious and daring bands of criminals in the country's annals of crime. The paper appeared thus:

No. 2 cover note & exit from porte-cochere roof. No. 4 pass handle to No. 1 at airport place. 2 & 5 & 6 wait with city as ordered to cover retreat & lead and if necessary see them. Crawford.

Thus it will be seen that the robbery was planned deliberately down to its smallest detail.

Indeed, the plot was carried to a successful and sensational climax right at the massive stone pillars and huge wrought-iron grille that constituted the Miller-Crosby gate. The wounded man was being led away by a policeman to await at the spot mentioned the coming of a patrol-wagon, already summoned. As the two emerged upon the walk the policeman was set upon and overpowered by three masked men, all armed with businesslike automatics. The prisoner was bundled into an automobile and, right from the midst of a group of curious and frightened chauffeurs, whisked away into the night.

During the ensuing fortnight almost the entire Sutherland force, not only of the Chicago main office but at every branch in the United States, was bending every effort to run to earth the "Secret Six" and their confederates. But it was Felix Hazard who finally drove the principal members of the crime syndicate to cover.

That the six principals for the time being eluded the police was in a measure disappointing; but a more vital issue was at stake, one far more serious than the capture of the criminals.

Helen Bertel at the time was in their power.

IV.

The Transcontinental's president, only half convinced, sat like one stunned.

"W-w-what you s-say is—is—damme, it's—unconceivable!" he spluttered in response to Hazard's asseverations. "I can't see how it is possible."

"Why, it is quite simple," said

Hazard patiently. "If you will examine the lists of the hundreds of parcels that have been stolen, you will see that every one of them was in some way handled in the Chicago main office—that is, either consigned here in the first instance, or sent here from some other city, or else relayed here while in transit."

"The deduction is inevitable that somebody in the Chicago main office has kept track of every valuable parcel, doubtless marked them for identification by the confederate chosen to steal them. I presume they have a code."

"Another thing you may learn by consulting the list of thefts: those in Chicago were, without exception, committed within a circumscribed area, a territory comprising not more than a half dozen city blocks. Do you appreciate the significance of that circumstance? It is this—a conclusion I arrived at on the day of your first visit here: the thefts could not go on for so long uninterrupted without police connivance. It is absurd to think that any large number of the force could be corrupted or coerced, so the way they worked it was for the wagons bearing marked parcels to drive to a neighborhood known to be 'safe.' There the wagons could be 'leisurely' loaded without fear of hindrance."

"Another thing," Hazard pursued; "at least one of the six has entree to Chicago's most fashionable society, as accurate knowledge on their part of Mrs. Philip Charters' intimate affairs and the episode of the Miller-Crosby ball indicate. For I am firmly convinced that the two and express with instructions to make the usual number of duplicates. Fill in a description form, then get back on the job. You mustn't lose sight of your quarry for a second."

The evening of December 22 was blustery and snowy and, outside the limited radius of the street lamps, almost unbelievably dark. As Helen left the "L" station and hurried along Fullerton avenue in the direction of Lincoln park and the lake (whence drove the boisterous wind), her hands elbow deep in a great muff, her chin snuggled warmly in her sable collar, her mind was animated by a single thought—to get to the bright coziness of her two rooms as soon as possible.

In consequence she paid but slight heed to a big closed touring car that drew up at the curb and halted a few yards ahead of her; and when, as she drew abreast of it and its tonneau doors were flung open, four masked men poured out, she was taken wholly by surprise.

A fifth masked man remained in the driver's seat.

In a twinkling she was surrounded. Any direction she looked she peered into the sinister muzzle of an automatic pistol. Before she had time to collect her scattered wits a heavy cloth was thrown over her head from behind and twisted tight. Next she was entirely enveloped in a long dark mantle so that she became merely a shapeless bundle.

If she had been minded to raise an outcry, it was impossible to do so now. She had been afforded no time even to free her hands from the muff.

His Right Hand Gripped a Big Automatic Pistol and His Features Were Concealed by a Black Mask.

thieves are one and the same crowd."

Hazard's buzzer sprang into activity. He snatched up his telephone and received a message from the outside office.

A messenger had just arrived with a report.

"Send him right in," ordered Hazard; and a few seconds later a girl entered softly and laid an envelope upon his desk.

He ripped it open and hastily scanned this note:

Support has been engaged off and on all morning preparing what I think is code letter. It is short, on single sheet, size of postcard, and typewritten. Five of these are ready to mail. No chance to see them. Crawford.

The reader's eyes lighted with satisfaction. He tore the sheet into tiny bits, and after a moment's contemplation of the object figure opposite him, said:

"Mr. Butler, I believe the opportunity I have been waiting for is about at hand. Tonight, or tomorrow night, I believe the Secret Six will all meet together somewhere. We have only not to lose sight of the one whose identity we are positive of to round up the whole crowd."

Mr. Butler went gloomily away, and a few seconds later a brisk, dapper individual breezed into Hazard's room. His manner indicated suppressed excitement.

"What is it, Crawford?" quietly asked Hazard.

"I've been fired," returned the other. "A few minutes after I sent you the note from the Transcontinental's Dearborn street office a man entered and was closeted with the suspect for perhaps twenty minutes. When he went away he had the five letters, stamped, addressed, ready to mail. Couldn't be trusted to any of the office force, you see. I got my hat and overcoat, meaning to follow him."

"Well?"

"I was called back and told to wait a minute. I waited thirty. Then Mr. Harry Butler called me into his private office and told me that if the Sutherlands couldn't supply him with a man more competent than I am, why, he could get along without any. Then he told me to beat it—or words to that effect."

"And the man who took the letters?"

"Of course I lost him. But I succeeded in muzzling him."

"Good! Give Miss Lettis the film

Her arms were clasped, not roughly but firmly, to her sides. She felt her skirts wrapped snugly around her ankles. Then she was bodily lifted and deposited in the automobile, which at once plunged away, she could not guess whither.

Not a word had been spoken by her captors.

It would seem that the abductors could have chosen an hour no more suitable for the successful perpetration of the outrage. Helen was helpless at the mercy of an unscrupulous gang, and apparently without hope of immediate succor from any source.

In a fashionable South side neighborhood things were happening, too, on this memorable night of December 22. Despite the cold and storm and wind-driven snow, in every cross street bounding an area of which a certain well-appointed flat-building was the center, automobiles were waiting. Muffled figures moved like wraiths hither and thither, keeping the house under surveillance from every possible angle.

At eight a big touring car, curtained, dashed up to the curb, and four muffled figures carried a shapeless bundle into the house. No one was near enough at the moment to form any conception of the bundle's nature. The watchers saw it carried into the house. They heard the door slammed. They saw the automobile hurry away. Then they closed in, tightening the cordon around the silent house.

Up a flight of stairs the bundle was carried, four men staggering beneath its weight. It was deposited gently upon a couch in a richly furnished room, peculiar in that it had no windows and only one door. The four men withdrew, locking the door after them, and the lights were extinguished.

As soon as Helen could free herself from the many folds in which she was swathed, she found herself in pitch-black darkness, unlit—save for her outraged feelings—and without the least idea of her whereabouts.

Outside, the cordon of detectives still waited and watched. Only five men were known to be in the house; a sixth had not as yet been accounted for.

A Sutherland operative on a nearby corner was startled by the apparition of a big, high-powered roadster as it drove skimming through the snow at breakneck speed. It halted within a pace for him, and a white, pinched face peered into his. A quivering voice that he scarcely recognized demanded to be told where Felix Hazard might be found.

"Ferndale!" exclaimed the surprised detective. "What's happened?"

"I must find Hazard right off. Miss Bertel has been kidnapped."

The detective wasted no time in talking. He whistled in a peculiar manner. The whistle was taken up and repeated, higher, louder, from a score of invisible sources, like the echoing plaint of some night bird.

From out the dark and the swirling snow Hazard appeared to the two. He harkened to no more than a dozen words of Ferndale's dismaying report, when the quiet neighborhood began to buzz like a disturbed beehive.

The lights in the prison room came on slowly, and Helen became aware of two ghostly, fantastic figures who stood over by the door. Two men they were, manifestly, albeit each was entirely covered with a sort of domino that hid every line.

With a swift, noiseless, gliding movement, the two weird forms closed in upon her; but she deftly eluded them. Then darkness again. Thus handicapped amid strange surroundings, she was obliged to yield when each of her wrists was seized in a viselike grasp.

She was propelled along the hall to a stairway and up this to another story. At last they halted before a double door, which swung apart as if by its own volition.

Filled with wonder, Helen surveyed a spacious room draped wholly in deep, lusterless black—floor, walls and ceiling. In the center of the floor stood an oval table, around which were arranged six chairs, all the same ebony hue. Three of the chairs were occupied by fantastic counter-parts of the two robed figures holding her wrists. The sole illumination was from six wax tapers that burned at each of the six places.

A pair of black velvet portieres parted at one end of the room and a sixth figure entered; one clad from head to foot in a lean formless robe like the others, with the exception that it was snow-white instead of black. This apparition seated itself at the head of the table.

For perhaps a full minute there was neither sound nor motion from any of the strange masked company. Then the white domino arose and addressed the others. At the first sound of his voice Helen started and looked closely at the neutral robe that betrayed nothing of its wearer's identity.

"You all have seen the captive; is there any doubt as to her identity?"

There was no answer and the hollow voice continued to issue from beneath the mask.

"It is positive, is it, that she is a detective from the Sutherland concern?"

The five ghoully figures remained silent, motionless, but Helen felt that every eye was upon her. Then the voice asked:

"What is your verdict?"

The white leader appeared to ponder a minute. Then he announced:

"The cord."

The leader clapped his hands thrice, and now entered a gigantic negro, as black as the room's hangings. He carried a silken cord, perhaps a yard in length. One end terminated in a loop through which he passed the other end, thus forming a noose. He tested the cord's strength, glancing from it to Helen's throat. Then he walked toward her. At the same time her captors shoved her forward.

The negro opened his arms to receive her. And in the instant of passing she determined her defense. She could not hope to overpower the giant, or even to resist him long, but she meant not to yield as long as breath was in her.

She fell forward, so that her shoulder, when she rose, came up under the outstretched right arm. At the same time she grasped the wrist with both hands and jerked it downward. She heard the man groan, but instantly his free hand caught the heavy coil of his hair and his head was pulled violently back.

So deftly and quickly that she could not make a move to resist, the noose slipped to her throat and was drawn tight. Firmly holding the cord, the black placed a knee in the small of her back and pushed her away from him.

She heard a shot. The hand holding the cord loosed its grasp and the negro sank limply to the floor.

The room was plunged into darkness. A momentary subdued stir, then Felix Hazard's voice rang out:

"We've got 'em. A light—quick!"

But, save for Helen, the lifeless form at her feet and the invaders, the room was empty. The Secret Six had vanished.

Safe in her own rooms—Hazard would not leave her until he saw her under Mrs. Hewitt's capable protection—Helen expressed a belief that the mysterious Six had not meant to murder her in cold blood. But Hazard was skeptical.

"They would stop at nothing," said he. "And who in the world would have thought of a tunnel a block long in a neighborhood so eminently respectable?" His tone was bitter. "The entire six of them walked away from the whole Sutherland force as if we were so many blind sheep."

"We'll get them sooner or later," declared the girl. "Don't forget that we now know the ringleader."

"You are positive about the voice?" asked Hazard.

"Yes, positive. It was Harry Butlers."

JUST TALKED OF SQUIRELS

Listener Discovered That "Big" Men Are Not Always Discussing "Big" Business.

Two pilgrims were following the road to Merca. At the treasury steps they met up with a squirrel that reminded the one who looked as if he owned a railroad to say to the other:

"I was showing my kid around the White House yesterday, and as there are no squirrels in the streets at home, I sort of frightened the boy when one of these little rascals tagged us. I told him that all it wanted was peanuts and that when it found we had none it would go away—whereupon the little chap had a bright idea."

"Well, daddy, you could give him a nickel, couldn't you?"

The two chuckled with the ease that comes of good nature united to health, and the other man—who looked as if he owned two railroads and a good mine—started in on a story of his own:

"I wouldn't be afraid to bet squirrels could learn to spend nickels, at that. One time we were having a rumble in the senate, with old Blank giving our side oratorical blood and thunder, and sir, just as we were about to be flayed alive, along hops a squirrel up the aisle, jumps on Blank's arm extended in denunciation—sits on its haunches and begins to hog. It seems he had a pull on the old man, who always carried nuts in his pocket—and it saved the day for us."

And by that time the story was through with, and the two pilgrims had reached the Garden of Allah—with a listener behind—Washington Star.

Little Sonny at Party Returned Empty Plate to His Rather Surprised Hostess.

Children are among the most beautiful springtime decorations of the national capital.

The freshness of these human flowers is something that never grows old. They are among the decorations that are with us always.

With this prelude here is another anecdote of Sonny.

When he was about two years old, just walking nicely and talking a bit, he was invited to a party given by a young lady of about the same age. His mother took him and left him there, then went away to return for him later.

After the children had played, the "ears" were served. Even the smallest ones were given a little ice cream. Sonny enjoyed his thoroughly.

Then he turned to his hostess.

"Here," he said, handing her his plate, setting down from the table and making his departure—Washington Star.

Getting a Spring Bonnet.

On a gusty day recently when the breezes were making playthings of one's headgear, a young woman was observed chasing her hat in Washington street, near Meridian street. It was a new spring bonnet, resplendent with gay flowers.

The wind was strong, and the young woman was not able to keep up. A gust tossed the hat in the air, and a hundred feet away. Two women, seeing the woman's plight, started also in chase of the hat. Suddenly, from the crowd, a fourth woman leaped out and grabbed the hat. Without looking she made for the nearest doorway, holding the hat closely to her side. The other women started toward her, and she began to run. She gained the doorway, and was lost in the aisles of a department store.—Indianapolis News.

Children Like "Play Cars."

"Play as You Enter" is the welcome sign on the sides of the "Jollytown" trolley cars in Baltimore, near one of the city parks, where the traction company has set aside several cars for the children to play in. The cars are complete in every detail except that the power is turned off and they are anchored to the ground. Instead of the usual advertising cards, Mother Goose rhymes and animal pictures are displayed along the sides. The constant din of recorder bells, clanging gongs, starting and stopping signals, and the loud calling of imaginary and unheeded street names afford a noisy proof to the amused passers-by of the extreme popularity of the "play cars" as the crews take them along fancied routes.

Pays Honors to Pasteur.

Admirers and disciples of Pasteur in France are commemorating his memory by scholarships as well as by ceremonial celebrations, according to information reaching Washington. The Association for the Extension of Pastorian Studies in Paris has established scholarships for young scientists amounting to 300,000 francs and is now issuing a special Pasteur medal as a means of raising additional funds for this purpose.

Lumber Production Decreasing.

Lumber production has been gradually decreasing in the United States, reports the Department of Agriculture. A survey recently made of 37 eastern and southern lumber-producing states showed that in one there was a slight increase made in 1922, on the other hand states on the Pacific coast report substantial increases, showing that the center of production is shifting to the western states, the last of our softwood reserves.

THE FREEMAN'S CENT-A-WORD ADLETS SAVE MONEY, TIME AND WORRIMENT--PUT YOUR "WANTS" UP TO THE LITTLE HUSTLERS

Irene Castle Treman, widow of the late Captain Vernon Castle, has instituted divorce proceedings in Paris against her second husband, Captain Robert E. Treman, wealthy Irishman (New York) manufacturer. Considerable mystery surrounds the affair, for after the divorce suit was filed she was found dining in Paris with her husband and denied she had authorized the filing of the suit.

HOW ABOUT THIS?

Are Female Feet Proper Subject of Discussion?

According to the Wise, Size and Shape Are Matters of Importance When Choosing a Mate.

When George Du Maurier wrote "Trilby" he did not, it seems, dispose for all time of the question of female feet. In the Latin quarter of Paris in the Victorian age there was much ado about them, as Little Billice very well knew. In New York they are probably not as much discussed but much more commercially important.

In the first place, it is doubtful if the Paris of "Trilby's" time ever boasted such a thing as a chiropodist. Times have changed a little since then, but not much. One is not more likely to mention one's "great toe" in this year of 1923 than one's grandmother was on the day of her wedding anniversary in 1823.

W. J. Bryan, who denies absolutely that intimate relations exist between us and the monkeys never—and this can be said without contradiction—studied in the Latin quarter of Paris, where it is said upon the authority of many great artists that the ugliness of the average woman's foot is only exceeded by the ugliness of the rear view of the average woman's knees.

Some one who has lived long in the upper reaches of Manhattan island has discovered that there are more chiropodists in that region than any place else. He has wondered why. The answer, which has been supplied, correct or not, is that the Jews are an Oriental people and that the Oriental people are notoriously troubled with ailments of the foot.

The story of the American Expeditionary forces in France can, according to a great many of our greatest generals, be written in terms of feet. These feet were at times incased in socks; at times were covered with blisters; at times were naked.

It is said to have been Napoleon who announced the proclamation that "an army travels on its stomach," but modern warfare has shown that an army travels on its feet. French railway cars to the contrary notwithstanding.

As a noted chiropodist was recently quoted, "There is nothing to show where the brains have been used, but on the foot there grows a callous."

No one shivers when a woman removes her hat, but it is customary to turn one's head when she takes off her shoes. Her head is apt to be sleek, well rounded—rather debonaire, in fact—but her feet—well, one does not look directly at them.

A beautiful woman cherishes her hand as a part of her beauty. It can be seen in its graceful lines even within the confines of her glove—its long, tapering fingers, its oval nails, its supple strength and all the rest of its beauty.

You can't see that in the foot. You can't see through the shoe the pearly instep, the pink toes, the velvet skin, the arch, the rounded rim, you can't see any of that. In fact, in a shoe you can see anything at all except the size of a woman's foot, and that doesn't tell anything about it.

Size of a woman's shoe does not mean anything, phenologists say, but those amateur matchmakers who pick out wives for husbands and husbands for prospective wives look a whole lot at the feet of boys and girls.

"Look," say the wise ones, "look well at the feet of your future mate. You don't want to marry a chronic case of corns and bunions, do you? Then see if he (or she) has well-shaped, healthy feet. Naturally it is not a subject of polite conversation, but there are ways of finding out."

Our Nation's Capital.

Washington has become the headquarters of more national organizations and associations than any other city in the country. A recent compilation, admittedly incomplete, lists almost 300. A few of these organizations have erected fine buildings that contribute materially to the beauty of the city. Among these are the American Red Cross, the Daughters of the Revolution, the National Academy of Science and the American Federation of Labor. One of these feature buildings will be the new home of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. The Scottish Rite temple on Sixteenth street, and the proposed new edifice on the old Dean estate, on which the Masons will spend millions, illustrative of what fraternal orders also are doing to enhance the attractions of Washington.

Masque of the Seasons.

It was a picture illustrating the seasons. First there was spring. Beautiful nymphs played by a brook. Into its limpid waters they dipped their rosy toes. They were lightly clad as befits spring. Next came summer. By the sea were more girls. Adorned the sands they leaped and gambolled. They wore fewer clothes and the wind toyed with these scanty garments. Such was summer.

Maw got up at this point. "Come on, paw," she ordered. "We won't wait for winter."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Dutch Farmers for Dismal Swamp.

Those fifty Dutch farmers who have come to America to escape high taxes would probably go to the Great Dismal swamp in order to get away from the low, wet ground.—Nashville Southern Lumberman.

Why City Lighting Was Opposed.

A hundred years ago the proposal to use gas for street lighting purposes was opposed in New England on the ground that artificial illumination was an attempt to interfere with the Divine scheme of things which had ordained that it should be dark at night.

MCCULLOUGH HELD FOR GRAND JURY

On Charge of Manslaughter Growing Out of Shooting of Archie Wynne at East Kingston.

Constable Michael McCullough of East Kingston, known locally as "Tosser," was placed under arrest by state troopers Thursday afternoon on a warrant charging him with manslaughter, first degree. He was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Webber at East Kingston where he pleaded not guilty and waived examination and was held to await the action of the grand jury. Later he was brought to this city where County Judge Fowler admitted him to bail in the sum of $3,000.

McCullough, who is a constable appointed by the town board, is charged with shooting Archie Wynne, a negro, on the night of June 23. Wynne died of the wound and at that time McCullough was questioned in regard to the shooting and claimed self defense. According to the story told by Wynne, he was proceeding home from work on the night of June 23, when he was walking along the street where the shooting took place. He was followed by three men and that set upon him took place. McCullough's son who was along ran to the house where the state troopers reside where he was taken by his father and informed that three men were being attacked by three men. The troopers responded and when they reached the scene they found Wynne lying on the ground. McCullough was taken to the Kingston City Hospital where he later died.

Controversy as to Which Department Shall Administer Its Affairs Is Lugged Aboard Transport Taking President Northward.

(Copyright, 1923, by International News Service.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Aboard U. S. S. Henderson, enroute to Alaska, with President Harding, July 6.—President Harding is Alaska-bound today with a sharp conflict existing within his cabinet over the policies that should be adopted in governing the vast northern territory.

How serious this cabinet division may be remains to be determined but it prevails and the controversy likely will be the subject of great many conferences between the president and his cabinet aides who are accompanying him into the far north.

The cabinet split hinges about the control of Alaska. Dr. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior, believes that the whole of the territory, equal in area to one-fifth of continental United States and with its natural resources yet virtually untouched, should be placed under the administrative control of a single department at Washington—preferably the department of the interior.

Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture does not agree and there are indications that he will resist strongly any attempts that may be made to take away from his department control of the vast forestry reserves in the territory.

In some respects the controversy is a re-percussion of the old Ballinger-Pinchot row over forestry conservation.

More recently the question of which department should control the public lands was the subject of dispute between Wallace and Albert S. Fall, who resigned as secretary of the interior last March.

Fall's retirement temporarily smoothed over the difficulty but with the advent of President Harding's Alaska trip it has again come to the fore in such a way that it may embarrass Mr. Harding in his attempts to reach a solution of the Alaska problem.

"Control of Alaska is now vested in thirty-five separate departments and bureaus in Washington," Secretary Work today. "I do not think there is any question but that this division of authority with its inevitable delay and red tape is responsible for the backwardness of the territory in commercial and agriculture department."

"I favor putting control of Alaska, and when I say control I mean everything from trees to bears, under one department—if not under the interior then under some other department. The present system is intolerable and cannot continue."

"There must be one central authority over the territory so that when a settler or a miner or a pioneer wants to obtain an opportunity to help develop the territory he can do so expeditiously and without going through 35 different bureaus in Washington."

"My own opinion is that this control should be vested in the interior department for the reason that it is the great holding company, so to speak, for government lands."

Secretary Work said he did not go so far as did Secretary Falls in desiring to extend his department's control over all forests. He feels that the forests of continental United States should be left under control of the agricultural department, but he is in favor of taking away the Alaska reserves. It is his idea to set up a colonial government in the department who would be the central authority on all administrative matters of the territory from courts to homesteads.

Secretary Wallace declined to be quoted on the Work plan today but he stated emphatically that he is opposed to relinquishing any of the agricultural department's control over forestry lands.

"The forests have always been under control of the department of agriculture," said Secretary Wallace. "Under this control there has been built up a wise policy of conservation which has saved to the people the great reserves of today against the time of national need."

"It is true that control of Alaska is vested in many different departments, but so is control of our other territories. So far that matter does the control of these bureaus extend over the individual states and yet there is no particular complaint on that score. Alaska is no worse off than the states of the union themselves."

Secretary Wallace disavowed any knowledge of the so-called Work plan, but he made it very clear that he will not see the forestry reserves of Alaska, the greatest in the world today, taken away from the forestry bureau of his department without some stiff opposition.

STATE PRESS ASSOCIATION CONVENTION BEGUN

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Buffalo, July 6.—The seventy-first annual convention of the New York Press Association opened here today. President Peter A. Blossom of the Brockport Republic presided at a round table conference held earlier by fifty newspaper owners.

Representatives of the daily and weekly papers held separate sessions today. There will be a joint session tomorrow.

Woolsey Reunion.

On Wednesday, July 4th, a reunion of the Woolsey family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Woolsey, Marlborough, N. Y. The house was gay with flags and bunting, and in spite of the weather dinner was served on the lawn. About forty-five people sat down to a delicious meal. After dinner there were games which everyone enjoyed either as participants or watchers. Several old friends and neighbors called to add their best wishes. Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Siles Woolsey, Mrs. Louise Hazzard, Mrs. Edith Schepmoes, Misses Lucy Hazzard, Elizabeth Hazzard and Edna Schepmoes, Frank Woolsey, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Woolsey and family, all of Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. John Woolsey, Waterbury, Conn.; Julian D. Society Notes

Saugerties, July 5.—Four car loads from Kingston and Saugerties arranged to have a picnic July 4 in the grove of Mr. and Mrs. Orville T. Smith of Kingston. The party was comprised of Mr. and Mrs. U. Grant Teetsell and sons Harold and Lewis and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Fiero and son Arnold, Mrs. S. F. Barker, Mrs. Elvira Mower and son Fred, Mr. and Mrs. William Fiero and daughter Ethel, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fiero and son William, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sagendorf, Mr. and Mrs. William Clement and Miss M. E. Van Valkenberg. In spite of a slight down-pour of rain a most enjoyable day was spent, recalling days of the past with Mr. and Mrs. Smith. The table was spread in their large barn and Mrs. Smith brought out their Edison phonograph to entertain the guests. The farm was formerly owned by Tobias Myer, an old house (stone) now stands, being built in 1807 and an old mill which has been famous for buckwheat flour for years past is still doing wonderful work by the present owner. It has been given the name of "The Old Knickerbocker" by a Knickerbocker Press reporter who visited the spot recently. It is certainly a fine spot for picnics, camping and bungalow sites, there being the mill-pond where fishing and swimming may be indulged in. The party left at 5 o'clock after thanking the host and hostess for their hospitality.

Steadiness was noted in the first two hours trading. Sentiment was somewhat improved, due to the rallying power shown in yesterday's late trading. Stocks receded only slightly from their previous levels and then turned extremely dull.

With liquidation in the railroad group completed, most important issues rose about 1 point. Oil stocks, despite announcement of additional oil cuts, displayed steadiness. Pan American Petroleum rose over 1 point to above 58. Strength in the motor stock featured the industrial list, with Mack Truck rising 2 points to 80.

Trading proceeded aimlessly in the afternoon. Delaware and Hudson was a weak feature, dropping six points to a new low, 96 1/2.

WILLIE RITCHIE TO TRY COMEBACK

Ritchie and His Two Little Daughters.

Willie Ritchie, who for two years has been threatening to come back again, has announced his intention of trying his luck in the ring.

This will be the former lightweight champion's first attempt. His first was not exactly a success, nor was it a complete failure.

Stopped by Leonard Ritchie was stopped by Benny Leonard in the final period of a bout scheduled to go eight rounds. With but a few seconds to go the referee intervened while Ritchie was still on his feet, although in a decidedly groggy condition.

Although Ritchie was stopped, he put up a remarkable battle. He forced Leonard to put up the best fight of his career to win. Ritchie did not show any signs of age. He was just as good as he was the night he fought his sensational affair with Lench Cross in New York a few months after he had won the title from Ad Wolgast.

In Good Condition. Ritchie is only thirty-two, and he has taken good care of his condition. There is no reason why he should not be able to fight almost as well as ever. The trouble is Ritchie never was a great fighter, although a pleasing one to watch in action. He was lucky enough to catch Wolgast when the Michigan Wildcat was in poor shape. He had no one to beat until he faced Fred Welsh and ran second to the light tapping Englishman.

Time for Ice Cream

One night recently Tris Speaker, returning to his hotel, met Tommy Connolly on the street. Tommy asked Tris where he was going.

"I'm going to get a dish of ice cream," came along and I'll buy you one," invited Speaker.

"I didn't know you ever indulged in ice cream," observed Connolly.

"Oh, I always like to eat a dish before I go to bed, it cools me off," explained Speaker.

"Then why don't you eat it during a game?" inquired Tommy.

And there was nothing to say in reply.

Diamond Squibs

The Flint club has returned Pitcher George Oeschger to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Vernon club shipped Outfielder Peppy O'Brien to Grand Rapids of the Int league.

Lutzke, the new Cleveland third sacker, is a good fielder but is weak at the bat.

Outfielder Fitzgerald, recruit from the Chicago Cubs, with the Decatur team, is playing lineup ball.

Pitcher Bill Rose, brought down by Shreveport from Milwaukee, has been turned adrift. He couldn't win.

Rip Wade, outfielder of the senators, has been sold to the Nashville club in the Southern association.

The Oakland club sold the veteran outfielder Dennis Wiley to the Little Rock club of the Southern league.

Dan Griner, veteran pitcher who is managing the Joliet team in the Kinty league, is an ace in that company.

The world's record for throwing a baseball is 381 feet 2 1/2 inches. Top record for batting a ball is 354 feet 1 1/4 inches.

John Campbell of Elmore, Ind., pitcher on this year's team, has been elected captain of the 1924 Purdue baseball team.

Cadet G. W. Smith, '24 of Norris town, Pa., has been elected captain of the United States Military academy baseball team for next season.

If anybody is hurt on the Mack team the betting is 8 to 5 that it is Sammy Hale. He doesn't seem to be able to play five straight games.

Some men were born years too soon. Wonder at present salary rates what Hans Wagner and Napoleon Lajoie could command today?

Babe Ruth is making good the boast of critics, who predict he will overtake "Cy" Williams of the Phillies for the home-run honors of the majors.

The thing that makes the Athletics, says a baseball observer, is that in his whole athletic population Manager Mack has nothing but warball players.

George Foster, who used to pitch for the Red Sox, has been given an opportunity to try a comeback with the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast league.

Competition in major league baseball is keener right now than it has been at any time so far this season, and the edge is getting sharper in both leagues every day.

Charles "Babe" Adams, a pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, is forty-one years old. He has been playing baseball 20 years, during which time he has won more than 130 games as a professional.

"Irish" Meusel of the Giants, by cracking out a brace of successive homers on Grover Alexander, accomplished a feat which no other player has ever been able to do during Alex's career in the National league.

Difference of Opinion. Eve was made from one of Adam's ribs. But everybody does not believe that. The Japanese believe that woman grew on a tree. The Persians believe that woman fell from heaven. The Laplanders believe that woman was once a rabbit.

Home-Run Record

Achieving the startling record of five home runs in six times at bat, Right Fielder Pete Schneider of the Vernon club in the Pacific Coast league has set a new world's record for professional ball players, and one which it will be difficult to beat.

University of Illinois

Star Is Heavy Slugger

One of the most promising of the recruits in the big leagues this year is Dick Reiche, the University of Illinois lad who has won a place on the Boston Red Sox.

Reiche, who hails from Clinton Ill., is not only one of the greatest diamond stars produced by the Illini in recent years but also holds the reputation of being a scintillating football performer. At Illinois Reiche had the advantage of working under both "G" Huie and Carl Lundgren, two of the best college baseball mentors in the country.

Ed Reulbach Shuts

Out Dodgers Twice

Edward Reulbach, former pitcher for the Chicago Nationals, is credited with being the only pitcher in organized baseball who pitched both on teams of a double-header and was able to blank the rival team each time.

Reulbach beat Brooklyn twice September 26, 1908, when the Cubs were making their great drive for the pennant. At that time the Chicago pitching staff was in poor condition and Reulbach volunteered for the double-header. Accounts of that game say Reulbach was better in the second game than in the first.

Plea for Tolerance.

No fault is great enough wholly to condemn any man. Great as it may be the fault is too frequently magnified by friends as well as enemies, disclosing a fault in them. Let him who is without sin cast the first stone.—Ort.

COLONIALS NOW BATTING .283 COYLE AND FORSYTHE TO FORE

Coyle is Now Batting .348 and Rube .342—Deegan, Schwab, McCue and Dahn Coming Very Near .300 Mark—Batting Average of Team As a Whole is Higher.

The Colonials as a team are now batting at a .283 clip which is a slight increase over their batting average earlier in the season. Although a number of the individual players who have been batting at a .300 clip have fallen a little below that mark, others who earlier in the season were not hitting as hard are crowding the .300 mark very close. Coyle has been leading his teammates for quite some time with an average hovering around the .350 mark. At the present time he is hitting .348. Rube Forsythe has been close on Bobby's heels and he is now hitting .342. McCue is much nearer the .300 mark at the present time than he has been any time this season. He is now batting .292. Matty Deegan, who has been hitting .300 or more throughout the season, is just two points below that mark at the present time. Billy Schwab is also nearing the .300 mark with an average of .293.

The complete averages follow:

Player	G.	AB.	H.	Pct.
Welch	7	17	7	.412
Orkan	10	15	6	.400

COLONIALS TO TRY ANOTHER PITCHER

Another pitcher will be with the Colonials, possibly today, to try out for a berth. This pitcher is Bud Mooley from Vermont who comes here with good recommendations as a real pitcher. Kervan, the man who has been umpiring on bases for the Colonials lately, has seen Mooley work in games which he has umpired out through the eastern section and speaks very highly of his ability. If Mooley doesn't arrive today he will surely be on hand for the games over the week end.

KINGSTON REGULARS WANT
GAME WITH STUDEBAKERS

Editor, The Freeman:

Kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper to show the baseball fans why the Kingston Regulars should not be entitled to a game with the Studebakers as they are playing just as fast teams and giving just as good a game. The fans should look over these scores and they will soon find out why Mooley's outfit doesn't care to play us. Studebakers, 12; Gardiner, 22. Regulars, 13; Gardiner, 15. Y. W. SWIMMING PARTY
TO BE HELD TUESDAY.

Because of the rain on Tuesday evening, the summer sociability club of the Y. W. C. A. held its meeting at the Y. W. headquarters on Henry street instead of at the beach at Kingston Point. A half hour was devoted to the discussion of various club problems and to lunch. After that the girls played the victrola and danced. Next Tuesday if the weather is pleasant the club and its friends will meet at the beach and enjoy a swim. If the weather is not suitable they will have a good time at the Y. W. C. A. on Henry street.

RUBY WINS TWO GAMES.

Will Play At East Kingston Next Sunday.

On Sunday, July 1, the Ruby baseball team beat the Hudson River Giants 21 to 5, a triple play at second base by William Schaffner was the feature.

On July 4th the Sawkill baseball team was defeated 4-2 in a fast game on the Ruby diamond. Johnson pitched airtight ball until the seventh inning when McCaffery, the Sawkill pitcher hit him on the head which unsteadied him and enabled Sawkill to score 2 runs. Harry Wood caught an excellent game for Ruby. Ruby plays at East Kingston next Sunday.

Sharing Birthday.

Paul and Phil were twins. One morning

Paul's aunt approached and Paul blithely replied: "Don't forget this is my birthday!"

"Mine, too!" chimed in

Phil. "No, it's only mine," stoutly maintained Paul. "I'm not going to celebrate my birthday. Other kids have a whole birthday all to themselves!"

"Well," calmly adjusted Phil, "you can have your birthdays in the mornings and I'll have mine in the afternoons."
